You Have Inflation.
But Don't Weep.
Regulated Flying.
Amazing Russian Worm.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

A LAW will presently become the "law of the land" compelling the nation to buy one billion, four hundred million ounces of silver. It is announced that the President will issue fifteen hundred million dollars of paper money to buy the silver. Conservative old fogyism yells "inflation," although it is not inflation, since the money will have silver back of it.

It will have more back of it than the government's bond on which the nation pays interest. Back of those bonds there is nothing but a paper mill, and the government's name. There are no longer any gold bonds; you can't get any gold.

Back of the silver money issued to buy silver there will at least be silver, and you can always buy something with that, in China, Mexico, India, elsewhere as well as here at home.

CONSERVATIVE OLD fogyism may as well realize that we have left the gold basis, and that a government bond is worth exactly as much as a piece of green paper with the government name on it, no more, no less. All you will get for any U. S. Government bond is pieces of green paper, when you come to sell it.

Why the government lacks the brains to issue only green paper and save one hundred per cent in interest is hard to understand. Perhaps the President means to do the thing slowly, that old fogyism may merely faint, not die of apoplexy.

In any case remember that you have inflation NOW, as we pump out interest bearing bonds by the billions. And we are going to have MORE inflation because we plan to give the three great guarantees to the people, guarantee of homes, guarantee of jobs, guarantee job insurance. You cannot do that with only "love and kisses," you must do it with money. And be it foolish bonds, bearing interest, or be it nice American greenbacks with Uncle Sam's name on it and no interest, the money will have to be issued.

FOR YOUR comfort remember that this nation, which has actually lost, according to careful statistics, more than ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND MILLION OF DOLLARS since the depression began, can well afford another hundred thousand millions to get out of the depression, if that amount is necessary.

This isn't any LITTLE country, or any POOR country.

One hundred thousand millions to the United States is less than ten millions would be to John D. Rockefeller, and you know or you can imagine how much that would be to him.

FOLLOWING THE loss of one passenger plane in the Catskill Mountains, you read about the destruction of another United States passenger plane in the Argentine, five killed, five injured.

It would be unfair to criticize flying methods without knowing every detail of each disaster, but the management of American flying lines, and the United States government as well, should be interested in regulations that France has established for flying over the Desert of Sahara.

The French minister of colonies issues regulations stipulating definite routes, with compulsory use of sending and receiving wireless outfits and definite regulations as to their use.

Something should be done to discourage the habit of running airplanes into the mountains on the Pacific and the Atlantic coasts. Higher flying, with reliable altimeters, if such things exist, and landing with radio guiding beams would seem essential.

THE RUSSIAN Communist worm turns with a loud report and prints an advertisement that will startle, bewilder and obfuscate, to borrow a word from Mr. Gene Tunney's vocabulary, one already bewildered "best financial mind."

Not content with advertising Russian gold bonds that pay 7 per cent, redeemable, principal and interest, "upon a fixed quantity of gold," and payable in any kind of money you like, Russia, in an advertisement printed in America, assures those buying Russian bonds that they "are thus protected against loss resulting from possible further reduction in the gold content of the dollar."

As it happens, there isn't ANY gold content to our dollar; it is

Old Loves Trap Carnera, Baer On Eve of Fight

EMELIA TERSINI

PRIMO'S PURSE TIED-UP IN BALM

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Romance with a distinctly materialistic tinge reared its head over the ropes at Madison Square Garden bowl today as two young ladies who believe they have financial claims against Primo Carnera and Max Baer put their lawyers to work.

Emelia Tersini, pretty London waitress whom Primo once described as a "little star" and who later played the stellar role in a breach of promise action against the giant Italian, succeeded in tying up Carnera's purse in an effort to obtain the $14,646 balm awarded her by a London court.

After 13 months of relentless effort, Miss Tersini, through her attorney, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Hamer appointing Michael Erceg, Bronx real estate man, as receiver of the champion's assets.

Meanwhile, Shirley LaBelle, jobless chorus girl who is suing Baer for $50,000 damages on assault charges, waited around while the Supreme Court prepared to rule on Max's motion for a bill

U. S. PROBES AIRLINER TRAGEDY

France, Belgium and Mystery Chemical Linked in Crash

By RAYMOND C. BAKER
International News Service.

LIBERTY, N. Y., June 13—Federal authorities injected themselves into the sevenfold tragedy atop Dunmead Mountain today, which probably will cause postponement of the inquest of the plane crash.

The federal men appeared on the scene shortly after it was discovered that William B. Bader, of Buffalo, a chemist for the Summit Solvay Company, of New York, had naval papers containing secret formulae of the government in his possession.

Bader was one of the four passengers and a crew of three who were killed when the American air liner crashed into the summit of Dunmead Mountain Saturday night during a dense fog.

Three vials containing a powder which Dr. Victor G. Bourke, Coroner of Sullivan County, believes may be explosives, also were found in Bader's luggage. Although it is strongly denied by American Air Line officials and aviation experts, Bourke has advanced the theory that an explosive Bader was carrying may have blown the ship apart and that it was not wrecked by a crash into the mountainside. Bourke said:

"Developments of the last few hours may cause postponement of the inquest. I am going into conference with District Attorney William Deckleman and federal agents immediately. I may have an important announcement after this conference."

Bourke said that he had been told "by a reliable source" that the papers found in Bader's possession reveal secret formulae on high explosives of the United States Navy. He said they also contain analyses from the United States Department of Mines.

Bourke stated:

"I have also been told that Bader's firm recently made large contracts with Belgium and possibly France for explosives."

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(INS.)—A sample of a high explosive, for which the Navy Department had requested bids, may have been responsible for the crash of the American airliner atop Dunnmead Mountain, N. Y., which caused the loss of seven lives, Secretary of the Navy Swanson disclosed today.

Hit-Run Driver Sentenced to Jail

Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County, today sentenced Earl R. Barclay, 42, of Barclay, it was testified, was the in jail after a jury had found him guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Barclay, it was testified, was the driver of an automobile which fatally injured Mrs. Rosaria A. Ciarletta, 42, of 1358 Fourth avenue, Coraopolis, May 7. Barclay failed to stop, witnesses said.

$30,000,000 WORKS LOAN UPHELD

Supreme Court Ruling Fnids County May Use U. S. Funds

The expenditure of millions for public works projects in this county, involving jobs for thousands of men, was virtually assured today as the Pennsylvania Supreme Court upheld the legality of the Allegheny County Authority.

By a vote of five to two, the state's highest court, sitting in Philadelphia, ruled that the act of December 27, 1933, creating the Authority, was constitutional.

Thus the way was cleared for the Authority to press its request for $30,000,000 Public Works Administration funds to be spent chiefly in bridge and road improvements.

BRIDGES AUTHORIZED

Already Congress has given its consent for the construction of seven bridges spanning the Allegheny, Monongahela and Youghiogheny rivers.

Other proposed projects include the strongly-opposed toll ramp at the south end of the Liberty Tubes.

The Authority has applied for a loan aggregating $24,000,000 based on 4 per cent bonds issued by the Authority and purchased by the government. In addition the agreement provides for a straight government grant of $6,000,000.

County Solicitor J. P. Pife said the House had passed a $500,000,000 Public Works Administration appropriation. As soon as this is approved by the Senate and the

WOMAN, ROBBER ROLL ON STAIRS

Police and detectives are searching for a man who grappled and rolled down the steps with Mrs. P. M. Dysart, when she surprised him in her home, 5821 Elmer street, late yesterday.

Mrs. Dysart, wife of a Schenley High School teacher, found the intruder hiding behind the door of a bedroom on the second floor. The stranger commanded:

"Don't you dare to yell."

Mrs. Dysart ran to the steps and screamed. The robber ran after her and placed his hand over her mouth, police said. In the scuffle the two rolled down the steps to the first floor. The robber escaped with a purse containing $1, police reported.

Mrs. Dysart's aged mother, Mrs. James W. Houston, was sitting on the front porch at the time, unaware of the incident. Police said the description of the intruder tallied with that of a man who went to the home of Mrs. Dysart's neighbor, Mrs. C. N. Holingsworth, of 5819 Elmer street, soliciting a window cleaning job, 15 minutes before.

Honor Hitler Aide, Harvard Paper Asks

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 13.—(AP.)—The Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily, urged editorially today that Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl, aide to Chancellor Hitler of Germany, be given an honorary degree from the university as a tribute to the position to which he has risen in Germany.

Not only as a son of Harvard returning for the twenty-fifth anniversary of his class commencement, should Hanfstaengl be greeted at Harvard, the editorial says, but he should be honored as no German official before him since Prince Henry in 1902.

Warns of Death, Dies in Pulpit

TORONTO, Ont., June 13.—(AP.)—Charles Shaw stood on the platform of a small gospel hall to deliver a sermon, a warning to his audience to be prepared for death. He said:

"One never knows when one might go out of this life. I love my Lord.

"I—I'm getting short of breath."

He gasped—and died.

Planes Guard Mussolini, Hitler

VENICE, June 13.—(AP.)—Venice, the "Queen of the Adriatic," assumed a gala atmosphere today for the meeting tomorrow between Dictators Mussolini and Hitler.

Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, and Premier Mussolini, of Italy, will be thoroughly protected during their meeting from any possible attacks from the air. Anti-aircraft batteries have been placed at strategic points to prevent any airplanes from approaching from overhead and a squadron of pursuit planes has been ordered kept in readiness prepared to take off at any moment.

Il Duce arrives late today and will spend the night in the Villa Pisani at Stra, near here. He will meet Hitler at the Lido airdrome when the latter arrives from Berlin at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

After accompanying the German Chancellor to his hotel, Mussolini will return to the villa where he will receive Hitler at luncheon. Conversations between the two are expected to include Mussolini's offer of a plan for Germany's return to the League of Nations and for closer co-operation between the two countries to offset France's system of alliances.

Wife's Bridge Game Leads to Parting

Her husband called her "dumb" because of her bridge game, and kicked her when she told him she wasn't going to support him any longer, Mrs. Clyde Bragg, of 322 Roup avenue, told Judge George V. Moore today.

Mrs. Bragg is seeking a divorce from Ralph L. Bragg, whom she married April 27, 1929.

Coolidge Mail Bill Goes to Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—Congress sent to the White House today a bill granting Grace Coolidge, widow of the late President, the right to send her mail free of charge.

Instead of placing a stamp on her letters, she can just write her name on the envelope.

MOTHER OF FIVE SERIOUSLY ILL

International News Service.

CALLANDER, Ont., June 13.—Mrs. Elzire Dionne, 25-year-old mother of the famed 16-day-old quintuplet daughters, suffered a serious relapse today when she developed a fever and fainting spells.

At 8 a. m., Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, believing his wife to be in a critical condition, rushed to the home of Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the attending physician.

Dr. Dafoe hurried to the Dionne home and following an examination of the mother, said:

"Mrs. Dionne's condition is serious, but I would not say that it is critical. She is run down, and will be kept in bed for complete rest."

The condition of the babies was reported as being satisfactory and all of them showed substantial increases in weight.

All-Night Parking On Streets Banned

Pittsburghers who park their cars on the streets all night were warned today by Traffic Magistrate Charles F. Papale and the Better Traffic Committee.

Magistrate Papale pointed out that the city traffic code provides fines for parking longer than one-half hour between two and six a. m.

TIGHE WON'T PRESENT JOHNSON OFFER TO UNION CONVENTION

Associated Press.

Government, industry and labor launched individual movements today aimed at averting a general strike of the nation's 400,000 steel workers. There were developments:

PITTSBURGH—While delegates to the convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers converged on this city for their strike vote, steel firm officials claimed overwhelming victory in "company union" elections.

WASHINGTON—Roosevelt advisers were drafting a new labor resolution to give the President "sweeping power to deal with the threatened situation."

NEW YORK—Members of the executive committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute met in what was termed a "routine" session. Observers said while the strike threat would come up, no action was expected in view of the institute's statement of its position transmitted to Gen. Johnson last week.

WILMINGTON, Del.—Federal Court fixed September 5 for a hearing on the governments' petition for a permanent injunction restraining the Weirton Steel Company from interfering with employes' elections after Earl F. Reed, of Pittsburgh, charged the steel union had attempted to intimidate workers.

Labor Ready For Vote on Holiday

Announcing flatly that they would not present Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's plan for creation of a special steel labor board to their convention, union leaders today indicated the suggestion might be totally ignored.

President M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, said he would not present the plan to the convention which reconvenes tomorrow morning in Elks' Auditorium.

Intimating he felt it was up to Gen. Johnson to come here himself and present the plan or send a representative, Tighe said:

"The plan wasn't given to me for presentation to the convention."

SPANG TELLS STAND

And William J. Spang, president of the Duquesne lodge of the Amalgamated and spokesman (or the rank and file leaders who were in Washington last week, threw up his hands and declared emphatically:

"I don't want anything to do with anything Johnson suggests. I don't know what the others might do, but I know I won't present it. As far as I am concerned, it doesn't exist."

Spang said a strike seemed imminent unless President Roosevelt steps in.

Asked what proposal would avert a strike, he replied:

"There's only one government proposal we could accept—recognition of the Amalgamated."

The executive board of the organization, comprised of the officers, has not discussed presenting the plan, but an individual might bring it up at the convention of his own accord, Tighe said.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that Johnson will not at-

White House Conference On Steel

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—President Roosevelt privately submitted to congressional leaders today a proposed administration bill, authorizing him to appoint federal conciliation boards to avert labor strikes and industrial warfare this summer.

Submission of the proposed legislation came on the eve of a threatened general steel strike on which a convention of union delegates will vote at Pittsburgh tomorrow.

The bill would authorize the creation of a conciliation board for each industry threatened by labor strife. Labor and management would be given equal voice with the public on these proposed boards.

The bill also carried provisions, rewriting in stronger language the labor-protecting guarantees of Section 7-A in the National Recovery Act. Penalty clauses were added to punish either labor or management for violation of the new bill.

PRESIDENT'S MEASURE

One copy of the new measure, part of it said to have been written in ink by the President himself, was given a group of Republican senators this morning. They held a secret half-hour discussion of the measure but withheld judgment pending some explanation of certain provisions.

The bill appeared to make some concession to organized labor. One section would give the proposed conciliation boards authority to supervise all labor elections in the various industries. It further would provide that he representatives elected by a majority of the workers in any industry, would have the right to speak in behalf of all the workers in that industry. This section would give the American Federation of Labor unions the right to represent all

COURT ORDERS CALVERT DATA

An order directing the guardian to file an accounting in the affairs of George H. Calvert, attorney, who was declared mentally ill at the time disbarment proceedings were pending against him, was on file today in Common Pleas Court.

The order said that upon confirmation of the account, the guardian—the Potter Title and Trust Company—would be discharged.

Hearing in the disbarment action brought against Calvert and former Judge Henry G. Wasson ended in Calvert's case when physicians testified Calvert was mentally incapable of preparing a defense. Wasson was disbarred.

Australian Birdman Coming to Air Meet

Aviation Day in Pittsburgh!

Famous pilots and a score of roaring planes celebrating it!

That is the thrilling event that thousands of persons will see Saturday afternoon at the City-County Airport.

The occasion is the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing Junior Birdmen of America Air Pageant starting at noon and lasting to 4:30 p. m.

Saturday, proclaimed Aviation Day in Pittsburgh by Mayor McNair will be dedicated to the Junior Birdmen—all members of a nation-wide youth organization.

Capt. Frederic W. Haig, one of Australia's most famous airmen, will be at the municipal field to greet and talk to the thousands attending the air show.

Besides Capt. Haig there will be many other fliers, who were scheduled to take part in the meet last week, postponed because of rain and a low flying ceiling.

Mayor McNair, in his proclamation issued yesterday, said:

"Owing to the fact that an Air Pageant is to be held by the Junior Birdmen of America in this section at the City-County Airport next Saturday, June 16, and that this event is certain to stimulate great interest in modern aviation not only on the part of the Junior Birdmen, but their friends and parents as well.

Missing Consul Found, Hunger Balked Suicide

NANKING, China, June 13.—(AP.)—The strange case of Elmei Kuramoto, the Japanese vice consul who disappeared four-and-one-half days ago, was cleared up today in time to avert threatened difficulties between China and Japan.

Kuramoto was found sitting in a graveyard beside an ancient tomb of the Ming dynasty.

He was unkempt, hungry, and uninterested in the fact that soldiers and warships had been called out by two nations because he had strayed.

He told Chinese authorities he had gone into the cemetery to commit suicide because he had failed to achieve promotion in the Japanese consular service.

Apparently he had not eaten during his sojourn and the pangs of approaching starvation saved him from self-destruction. He said:

"Hunger forced me to hold on to life."

Japan had informed the Chinese government officially that it would hold that government responsible for the safety of the vice consul, who dropped from sight in Nanking last Friday.

Japan backed up its note with warships which it rushed up to anchor off Nanking.

German Soldiers 'Invade' France

STRASBOURG, France, June 13.—(AP.)—The French authorities here reported that 22 German infantrymen from the Wurzburg garrison crossed the Rhine on June 6 and visited Landau.

The French allege that this was a violation of the Versailles treaty which bars German "armed forces" from the left bank of the Rhine.

BRITISH DEAF TO U. S. OFFER TO TAKE GOODS FOR DEBT

...LL PROPOSAL FAILS TO WIN SUPPORT

Europe Again Balks at Reducing Huge Obligations

LONDON, June 13.—(AP.)—Great Britain does not intend to make a war debts payment "in kind," as suggested in an American note yesterday, it was indicated today in authoritative political circles.

Great Britain, it was understood, believes payment in goods would only complicate the situation.

Much surprise was created in London by the reference of Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, to payments in kind, as the United States heretofore has insisted on dollar payments.

Official quarters at Downing street were silent while the cabinet took a full opportunity to study the situation before the government's attitude is stated to Parliament, probably tomorrow.

The view held in political quarters here, summed up, is that Great Britain is not in a position to pay war debts either in kind or in any other way.

Partial Debt Payment In Goods, U. S. Idea

WASHINGTON, June 13—(AP.)—President Roosevelt is willing to consider payments in goods by European war debtors only on a partial basis.

This was made known at the President's semi-weekly press conference in comment on the United States note to Great Britain yesterday pertaining to the payments due next Friday.

The suggestion for this manner of payments made in the note was declared not to be an offer for full payment on such a basis.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that the American note was simply a reply to the British default, pointing out a way of payment rather than making an offer.

In other words, the United States said it was willing to discuss the war debts if asked by Great Britain and is willing to consider ways of avoiding the obstacle raised by the British of making full payments in cash.

Secretary of State Hull, strongly disagreeing with British arguments for defaulting on the debt installment due this Friday, declared any proposal for payments in goods and services "which promise mutual benefit will be carefully considered."

Such commodities as tin, rubber, jute and silver immediately came to the minds of observers as they studied the note. The world's greatest tin mines are largely controlled by the British.

As the Hull note was made public last night, French Ambassador Andre De Laboulaye called to present a missive, officially still a secret, but known to declare that France will default for the fourth time on Friday.

France Hopes Its Wine Will Help Pay U. S. Debt

PARIS, June 13.—(AP.)—The possibility of settling defaulted war debts to the United States by a partial payment "in kind" was received in French official quarters as a hopeful suggestion for solution of the vexing problem.

It is expected by government officials that the offer to make some payments in goods, made by Secretary of State Cordell Hull to Great Britain, will be extended to France.

Payments in goods rather than gold would meet many French objections to settling the account with America.

HOUSING BILL BATTLE RAGES

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Leaders in the battle for the administration's housing bill, drastically revised by the House Banking Committee, scented victory in the House today.

A surge of loyalty to the administration was apparent as the measure, which will put government billions behind a vast building program, neared a decisive test.

Although an overwhelming majority of the committee revised the measure as drafted by the Federal Emergency Council, the House may override the committee.

In its only vote on an important amendment, the House restored an administration provision which would permit the guarantee of mortgages on slum clearance projects.

OUSTER ORDER WEIGHED BY FIX

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—(AP.)—Alvin F. Fix, of York, has not made up his mind whether he will comply with President Roosevelt's request for his resignation as collector of internal revenue in the Philadelphia area.

Given until today to hand in his quitting notice, Fix yesterday would not say that he would refuse to resign under fire but indicated he was seriously considering that course.

He denied soliciting political contributions from employes in his office, the charge on which the Civil Service Commission yesterday recommended his dismissal along with that of his assistant, William E. Brown, and suspension of five other employes for a year.

Instead, he declared he tried to keep politics out of his administration by refusing persistent pressure to give jobs to political favorites. He said:

"From the time I was inducted into office to the present, I have stood with my back to the wall to retain men of long experience in revenue work."

Roosevelt Mother 45 Minutes Late For Degree

BETHLEHEM, Pa., June 13.—(AP.)—Even an honorary degree from the oldest established Protestant girls' school in America fails to fluster the mother of the President of the United States, Mrs. James Roosevelt.

On her way to receive the honor at the Moravian Seminary and College for Women, Mrs. Roosevelt stopped at Easton for lunch and arrived at the Bethlehem school 45 minutes late.

An ovation from the commencement crowd greeted her on her arrival, interrupting the commencement address of Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, former ambassador to Japan.

She said as Dr. E. J. Heath, president of the college, conferred the degree:

"I never thought I'd wear a gown and a mortarboard."

just a dollar, printed on a good quality of paper, with the best name in the world signed to it. There is no gold about it.

Who would have thought, when our "best minds" were predicting an early collapse of the Russian Soviet government, that Russians would soon be inviting us to invest our feeble dollars in their safer gold bonds?

And who would have believed what is now the fact, that Russia would be producing more than twice the gold that the United States produces?

THE LEARNED senators object to the confirmation of Professor Tugwell as Under-Secretary of Agriculture, on the ground that he is "not a dirt farmer." Leaving out other questions, is it necessary to be a "dirt farmer" to be a good Under-Secretary of Agriculture?

The man who invented the sewing machine couldn't sew. You would not insist on having a seamstress in charge of a great clothing factory. The late American railroad builders, Vanderbilt, Harriman and Hill, never ran a locomotive, or drove spikes into railroad ties. But they could build and run railroads.

You can be a successful editor without knowing how to set type, although printers, among them the late Ed Matthews, of the New York Evening Journal, have been among the ablest of editors. You might be a good Under-Secretary of Agriculture without knowing on which side of a cow you sit in milking. Professor Tugwell's appointment will be confirmed.

IS THERE to be no end of Bolshevism in this glorious country of ours?

Not content with selling milk at eight cents a quart to poor mothers, Mayor LaGuardia, finding that dealers in ice have combined to put up the price, plans a municipal ice plant to sell cheap ice with the cheap milk.

Is there to be no consideration for vested rights? Will it be seriously maintained in this country that the welfare of children and the peace of mothers are more important than the profits of an ice or milk dealer?

THE DETERMINED Japanese, with low-priced money and cheap labor help, are reaching out for business. Bucharest reports Japan offers to renovate the Roumanian Army, with flying machines, weapons of all kinds and ammunition factories in Roumania for twenty-five per cent less than any other bid.

Other nations will find it hard to compete with Japanese manufacturer and prices. Our nation, fortunately for its future, could live within its own boundaries, without any export business, if necessary. We could be as independent of Europe and Asia as we are now of Mars.

DENOUNCES NRA AS HE QUITS DARROW BOARD

Thompson Goes Out Telling Roosevelt Eagle Failed

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Asserting, in effect, that the NRA has fizzled, and that it is monopoly-ridden and controlled by big interests, W. O. Thompson resigned today as a member of the National Review Board, whose chairman is Clarence Darrow.

Thompson, a former law partner of Darrow's, addressed a long letter to President Roosevelt, in which he criticized the NRA, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and, inferentially, his colleagues on the board.

In his letter, Thompson said he alone was responsible for the supplementary report that accompanied the first Darrow report, signed by himself and Darrow. This was the report that spoke of "socialization of industry" as probably the only way out. It caused considerable furor. Thompson said he would leave it to Darrow to make his own "judicious explanation" of why he signed it.

The National Review Board, Thompson said, was appointed to ascertain and report whether "any code, or codes of fair competition, are designed to promote monopolies or to eliminate or oppress small enterprises." His letter continued:

"The report submitted to you (the President) clearly indicated that small business is being oppressed and eliminated by monopolistic trade practices written into the codes. It revealed also the domination of code authorities by the largest producers in each industry we investigated."

Thompson said the board "without my knowledge or signature" issued a statement on June 9 approving the newly-announced NRA price-fixing policy. This statement he described as "merely a maneuver by which it hopes to re-establish itself in the good graces" of the NRA.

JOHNSON-NRA PARTY IN W. VA.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—The National Recovery Administration's chief, Hugh S. Johnson, will spend its first birthday—Saturday, June 16—as honor guest at a celebration in Charleston, W. Va.

The celebration has been planned by Gov. H. C. Kump and other officials and citizens of West Virginia as a testimonial of the satisfaction and appreciation of people of the state for the accomplishments of NRA.

Details of the celebration, made public today by the recovery administration, included plans for Johnson to fly from Washington to Charleston, accompanied by Donald Richberg, general counsel of NRA; Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady, and Miss Frances M. Robinson, the administrator's assistant.

Pennsylvania Company To Increase Trips; Gets Contract

Extension of airline operations through Pittsburgh into Milwaukee, Wis., was announced today by Pennsylvania Airlines and Transport Company, coincidental with the announcement that the Pittsburgh company had been awarded a government mail contract from Detroit to Milwaukee.

Pennsylvania Airlines, operating passenger and express service at present between Detroit and Washington, plans to increase operations immediately, adding another round trip beginning next Saturday, making four in all, and planning a fifth by July 1.

CONDUCT SURVEY

Airmail operations on the Detroit-Milwaukee link will be begun as soon as a survey over the new route is completed—probably by July 1, according to C. Bedell Monro, executive vice president.

Pennsylvania Airlines, recently reorganized in accordance with the federal regulations for air mail carriers, has broadened its scope of operations and has absorbed the Kohler Airline operations at Detroit. The local concern took over the Kohler amphibian equipment and personnel. Additional tri-motor equipment also will be added for the extended operations between Washington and Milwaukee.

NEW STOPS SCHEDULED

Bases of operations will be maintained by Pennsylvania Airlines, according to Mr. Monro, at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Milwaukee and either Muskegon or Grand Rapids.

On the new link stops will be made at Milwaukee, Muskegon, Grand Rapids, Pontiac and Detroit. Between Detroit and Washington stops are made at Cleveland, Akron and Pittsburgh.

AIR MAIL BILL SIGNED

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—A tumultuous chapter in air mail history was closed yesterday when the President signed the bill providing for mail transport on one-year contracts let by competitive bidding but subject to indefinite extension.

The new law, barring all intercorporate affiliations of mail lines except for the purpose of owning landing fields, forces radical readjustment of the corporate setup of the major aviation systems, most of which are already under way or accomplished.

Its provision limiting a company to three contracts, however, is to be amended by an administration bill now pending in the Senate which would fix the limitation at one primary and two additional routes, the meaning of the word "route" being left up to the Postmaster General.

Waynesburg Degrees For 2 Dormont Boys

WAYNESBURG, Pa., June 13.—Two Dormont boys were among the 60 graduates who received degrees at commencement exercises of Waynesburg College today. They are Malcolm Hayden and Charles Watson.

Honorary decrees were conferred of Dr. William C. Covert, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, who delivered the commencement address; the Rev. Dr. Frank M. Sisley, of Evanston, Ill.; Miss Nellie W. Donley, Morgantown, W. Va., public school executive; the Rev. Robert J. Shields, of Masontown, and the Rev. Clarence C. Fisher, of Waynesburg.

FIRE ROUTS 700 IN WILMERDING Y. M. C. A.

Women Flee Pool in Bathing Suits; 5 Hurt

Seven hundred persons, many of them women, fled the Wilmerding Y. M. C. A. Building last night when fire swept the top floor of the three-story brick structure.

Two women were cut by glass in crawling through shattered windows to escape from the basement pool, one woman collapsed from fright, and two firemen were overcome by smoke.

An audience of 600 was viewing the movie "Men in White" in the auditorium when a boy rapped on an exit door from the outside and yelled, "Fire."

AUDIENCE CALMED

Harry A. Rowe, general secretary of the institution and ushers called out to the audience to remain calm as there was a slight fire in an upper floor.

Without disorder, the men, women and children filed out the main entrance and two exits.

Sixty women in the pool in the basement grabbed their clothing and ran out exits to the street wearing their bathing suits.

Two women, Mrs. Edward Ryan, 329 Short street, and Mrs. Albert Henritz, 810 Fifth street, both of Trafford, crawled through a window which someone had broken in giving a warning. They suffered slight cuts.

AIDED TO SAFETY

Mrs. William I. Omanstec, of 804 Fifth street, Trafford, collapsed and was aided from the building.

A group of boys in another room also ran out.

Two firemen were overcome in battling the blaze which was confined to the education room on the third floor.

Cause of the blaze had not been determined today. The damage was placed at around $5,000.

U. S. TO OPERATE IDLE PLANTS

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—Extension of the relief program to include government operation of two underwear factories at Boston was being worked out today, with a possibility that other idle factories would be utilized along similar lines.

To date, such activities to make jobs and have the products distributed to those in need have been limited to operation of canneries in rural sections to preserve surplus vegetables.

Proposals were made to Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, several months ago, that some idle factories be opened to provide employment for operatives in making shoes and garments to be distributed to the unemployed.

The Massachusetts case is the first, apparently, where that proposal is being followed.

President, the money will be ready for allocation.

SELF-LIQUIDATING

To provide interest and sinking fund charges on the authority bonds the projects will have to be self-liquidating, it was pointed out.

The bridges contemplated are the Highland Park bridge across the Alelgheny River; Homestead High Level Bridge; the Rankin bridge, the Dravosburg bridge, the Glenwood bridge and the new Downtown bridge over the Monongahela River, and the Fifth avenue bridge over the Youhiogheny River at McKeesport.

Legality of the Authority was contested by Henry Tranter, manufacturer and member of the City Transit Commission, in a friendly taxpayer's suit carried directly to the Supreme Court.

In its lengthy opinion the court held that the act setting up the authority was within the subject matter of the Governor's proclamation for the special session of last December; that it did not vest legislative powers in a private commission and was not in violation of the State Constitution.

The authority consists of J. C. Trees, Press C. Dowler and W. McK. Reed.

Flames Confined To Kingboro Attic

Fire of undetermined origin did $200 damage to the home of Mrs. Lillian Johnston at 317 Kingsboro street early today. The fire was confined to the attic.

NAME TRUSTEES FOR CAR FIRM

Trustees under a reorganization plan for the Pressed Steel Car Company were appointed today by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson on motion of counsel for the company.

The trustees are George D. Wick, F. N. Hoffstot and W. A. Bonitz, who have been functioning as receivers since their appointment in an equity action May 10, 1933.

A petition filed under the amended bankruptcy act seeks to effect the plan for reorganization. The petition asked the court for permission to submit the plan. Wick said it would be offered in the near future.

The petition set forth that the company is solvent in the sense of having assets of aggregate value far in excess of the aggregate amount of its liabilities, but that for more than a year it has been unable to meet obligations as they mature.

The petition said there are at present about four million dollars worth of orders on the books and the balance sheet shows assets of $43,816,480.59.

Under the court order appointing the trustees, they have all the power heretofore possessed as receivers, and nothing in the new order will effect the lien of security, priority or validity, or any obligations or commitments contracted by them as receivers.

TUGWELL FACES FINAL TEST

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—The anti-Tugwell men rallied for their last stand in the Senate today.

After one last burst of fireworks, Democratic leaders predicted, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's promotion from assistant secretary of agriculture to undersecretary would go through with ease.

The margin of victory, however, was believed likely to be a bit smaller than yesterday's, when the agriculture committee approved him, 16 to 2.

Senator Smith (Dem.) of Carolina, who complains that Tugwell is not a dirt farmer, and Senator Byrd (Dem.), of Virginia, who expressed mistrust of his ideas, were expected to lead the opposition again.

Threat of Noose Hurled At Huey Long Over Taxes

BATON ROUGE, La., June 13.—(AP.)—"No more taxes—or else!"

With full-throated roars of approval for suggestions that the "else" might include pistols and the noose, a state-wide protest meeting hurled demands for economy and reform at Senator Huey Long and the state administration.

The thousands attending the meeting last night adopted a set of resolutions telling Louisiana's lawmakers what is expected of them.

The Legislature is considering a "property tax relief" program for which Senator Long stumped part of the state and this was the bullseye of the attack. It would substitute special levies for present taxes, but speakers and resolutions demanded property tax relief without additional taxation.

Asserted Mayor George W. Hardy, Jr., of Shreveport:

"If it is necessary to teach them decency at the end of a hempen rope I for one am willing to swing the rope."

He said:

"The next summons must and will be a call to arms unless the present protest is heeded."

Then the mayor asked:

"How many of you will come back to Baton Rouge if the demands we voice are not heeded? Hold up your hands."

As hands appeared above heads, several shouted:

"We'll bring our pistols, too."

Losses in World Trade Mounting, Says Peek

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP.)—George N. Peek, in a report to President Roosevelt on a study covering the past 38 years of America's foreign trade, asserted today the trend "has been cumulatively disadvantageous to us."

Peek, special advisor on foreign trade to the President, advocated the creation of a balance sheet between this country and the rest of the world. On it would be placed in black and white the trade balances with each country.

He declared imports and exports must balance in the long run. On the basis of the past 38 years, he asserted, the world is in "debt to us for goods" in the amount of $36,646,000,000.

Adding in governmental and private loans to Europe during the war, and subtracting investments made by foreigners in this country, Peek added another $22,645,000,000 to the debt owed this country by the world.

President Roosevelt, commenting later at his press conference, said that while the report was a preliminary estimate and subject to change it seemed to disprove the theory that the United States had made a great amount of money from its international trade.

The President said no consideration had yet been given to the Peek figures with regard to tariff negotiations to be conducted under the administration's new reciprocal trading act which he signed last night.

BANS OR FANS? NUDIST WAR STILL RAGES AT WORLD FAIR

DANCERS REBEL AS 'LID' CURBS RISQUE ACTS

'Dignity Won't Draw Crowds,' Wail of Concessionaires

By INEZ BROCKWAY
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Bans or fans?

A hot-cha battle is waging over them in the World's Fair. Concessionaires have mutinied against what they consider the Bible-belt edicts of staid officials.

Nude dancing is banned. Lewd peep shows are banned.

That's what the management says. But the concessionaires say heh-heh.

Rufus Dawes, president of the exposition, explained that he has no intention of changing his stand. He said:

"The fair is more than a carnival. It is Chicago's show for the entire world and thus must maintain its dignity."

DIGNITY DOESN'T DRAW

Ernie Young, impressario of the snappy show in the Italian village, said:

"Dignity didn't draw the big crowds last year. We know better what people want. They are on vacations when they arrive. They want fun, laughter, entertainment after a day of delving into scientific and industrial wonders."

Mr. Young thought it might be a good idea if he installed an organ and passed out hymn books. As he spoke, his ballet was doing the Carioca in shimmering white satin gowns that in subtle and suggestive gleams belied their virginal color.

Dorothy Denise still puts on her sensational black panther dance at the Canadian Club, dressed in a coat of shining ebony paint officials once dragged her out in a bathrobe bought for that purpose, but she's back again, sans the robe.

DANCES AT NIGHT

She doesn't dance during the day, however, because electric lights at night make her glisten more modestly than sunlight would.

Mona Leslie, at the Streets of Paris, still does her Diving Venus number, tallieured in a coat of white paint. She rises from beneath the stage on a moving platform, like a statue emerging from a well. Gracefully dancing to the spring board, she slips into the water.

Officials hoped she might stay under, but she swam right through a tunnel to the rising platform.

Venus on the half-shell, living models and all of last year's peep shows still line the streets of Paris, though, depending on the enterprise of fair police, they have to close and open constantly, like frightened oysters.

SALLY NAMES PRICE

Paris presents a successor to Sally Rand who, by the way, will flit her fine feathers again this year for any concession that can fly up to her price. The successor sports two fans, a mamma and a baby, which continually get in each other's way, and thus fail to conceal the dancer's demure form, smothered in a suit of heavy underwear.

At Old Mexico, Rosalie puts on her famous fan dance, too. So far, censors have only told her not to forget to remember the fans are her only clothing.

The new Mexican village worries little about the censors. It's performances, staged by Serge Oukrainsky, is colorful, quaint and comic, but not nudish.

The Spanish Village too has a muchly dressed show of native singers and dancers, but is planning a more risque edition. The Bowery, opening Saturday night, also promises this and that. To date, only the Swiss and Belgian villages could be called costumer's delights. But one never knows what summer heat will do.

WIDOW, NURSE FIGHT FOR CASH

HARRISBURG, June 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. Alice Neely, Philadelphia school teacher, suing to obtain the proceeds of a $10,000 insurance policy on the life of her husband, Mr. Edgar C. Neely, says his attitude toward her changed after Miss Amelia Hancock, a nurse, became his secretary.

On the stand, disputing Miss Hancock's claim to the money—reassigned to the nurse a month before the physician's death—the widow told a Dauphin County jury yesterday that Dr. Neely came home late at night after he had hired Miss Hancock.

Mrs. Neely and her husband were separated for about a year before his death but she said divorce proceedings were dropped at his request. Counsel for Miss Hancock denies the nurse influenced the doctor, contending the insurance policy was assigned to her for her services.

DILLINGER HUNT REVIVED BY TAXI MAN

Driver Declares He Borrowed Cigaret From Bandit

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 13.—(AP.)—The will-o-the-wisp trail of John Dillinger turned back to the Northwest today as federal officers checked a report that the Indiana outlaw had been seen alive.

Donald Murray, a former taxicab driver in Chicago, reported that he had seen Dillinger in Northfield, Minn., 45 miles south of here, about 3 a. m. Tuesday morning. Murray said he knew Dillinger because he had driven him "dozens of times" in his cab.

Murray's story, not altogether agreeing with known facts about Dillinger, was that he alighted from a freight train and approached a parked car containing four men.

Murray said:

"I wanted a smoke and when I saw someone in the car light a cigaret, I walked over to ask for one. When I got within 50 feet of the car, they turned on the lights inside of the machine and Dillinger and the driver beside him in the front seat turned flashlights on me.

"'What the — do you want?' Dillinger asked as I came near.

"'All I want is a cigaret,' I told them.

"'Here's your cig,' the driver said. I reached in the car to get it and saw a machine gun lying on the floor of the back seat. I recognized Dillinger and the other three men looked plenty tough to me, too. When he handed me the cig, the driver told me, 'Now get out of here.'

"I didn't stop to argue."

Dillinger Arrested!
Joe—Not John

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—(AP.)—Well, they arrested Dillinger last night; pulled him off a freight train.

He'd been down in Tennessee. When they nabbed him not a shot was fired, nor even a gun drawn.

He made no effort to conceal his identity. When detectives asked his name he said:

"Dillinger."

The sleuths were all but speechless.

"Dillinger? Not—not John Dillinger?"

The man answered:

"My name's Joe. John's my cousin."

He was to be turned loose today.

Returns 32-Carat Gem

EILEEN GILLESPIE . . . SHE RETURNED THE ASTOR RING

Miss Gillespie, the society girl whose engagement to young, rich John Jacob Astor III, 21, was broken off. Today the 32-carat gem given her at the time of the betrothal was returned—with all other gifts and an explanation by her mother that it had been withheld until Mr. Astor made an apology to the Gillespies.

ASTOR APOLOGY WINS BACK RING

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP.)—Young John Jacob Astor has his ring back—the $100,000 32-carat diamond he gave Eileen Gillespie, society girl, his former fiancee.

In exchange for the ring, said Miss Gillespie's parents, the 21-year-old Astor, one of the world's richest young men, delivered a written apology for "his language to their daughter" and retracted "threats concerning her and her family."

With the ring, said the Gillespies, was returned "every other article received by Miss Gillespie from Mr. Astor except those of a perishable nature which unfortunately could not be returned."

The transaction was completed behind locked doors in the office of a Fifth avenue jeweler, with attorneys for both sides present to handle the legal aspects of the bargain.

The Astor scion and Miss Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie, were to have been married last winter. The wedding date had been set and arrangements made for a brilliant affair. Then came news that jolted Mayfair. The Gillespies announced the wedding was all off.

But Miss Gillespie retained the ring, an Astor family heirloom, once owned by the Empress Eugenie.

Astor sailed on a trip around the world "to forget."

He returned last month, said he was wondering when he would get the ring back, and proceeded to become engaged to another debutante, Ellen Tuck French, who was to have been a bridesmaid at the Gillespie-Astor wedding. He gave her another ring.

DUKE THREAT TRAPS BOY

International News Service.

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—A 17-year-old Newark boy, who threatened to bomb the Somerville (N. J.) estate of Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, prepared today to be escorted to the National Training School at Washington for an intensive course, calculated to purge him of false notions that villainy is romantic.

The youth, Thomas Layden, was still a trifle bewildered by the swift series of events precipitated by his threats to the richest girl in the world and to Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation.

His attempt to extort $2,000 from each resulted in his speedy apprehension, arraignment, indictment and sentence.

He was placed on probation for three years by Federal Judge Fake. Sentence was suspended and then, like other unruly schoolboys who annoy the government by their desperado worship, he was told he would have to attend classes at the Washington institution.

Auto Driver Held, Denies Hitting Man

Despite his denial, Frank Kaptain, of 1837 Tustin street, was held on a manslaughter charge for the grand jury today by a Coroner's jury in the death of Joseph J. Batterton, 49, of 5126 Lytle street.

Two witnesses testified it was Kaptain's machine that struck Batterton as he was walking in Hays road, Mifflin Township, June 3. Kaptain said he had no knowledge of striking anybody.

FLAMES DOOM SHIP, 17 SAVED FROM SEA

Captain, 16 of Crew Adrift for Days, 17 Missing

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP.)—The destruction by fire of a nitrate laden freighter, so suddenly that her crew was forced to take to boats without calling for help by wireless, was reported today in radio messages received here.

Seventeen of the crew were missing, the captain and 16 of his crew were rescued after drifting in a lifeboat for nearly three days.

The burned ship was the Norwegian freighter Knut Hamsun, bound for the United States with a load of Chilean nitrate. First word of her destruction came today from the United Fruit liner Zacapa, which reported the rescue of the captain and 16 members of the crew.

PICKED UP AT SEA

They were picked up in the Caribbean Sea approximately 300 miles north of Colon, Panama. Capt. George McBride, of the Zacapa, in a brief message to his offices here, said the Knut Hamsun burned and sank Sunday night. A later message said the Zacapa had made a two and one-half hour search for a missing lifeboat containing 17 men, but without results. The two messages were all that had been received from Capt. McBride and whether he had given up hope of finding the missing men could not be learned.

The United Fruit Company, which received the reports from the Zacapa, said there had been no record of any wireless calls for help Sunday night. Company officials expressed the belief the freighter had been swept by fire so quickly she had no chance to send out an S O S.

DRIFTS FOR MILES

The exact spot where the Knut Hamsun sank was not reported, but it was considered likely the lifeboats had drifted many miles from the scene of the disaster.

When the Knut Hamsun docked at Norfolk on her trip from Chile previous to the one she was making when burned, the vessel reported she had sustained damage to her bottom on the west coast of South America, but left on the return trip without making repairs.

'Siren Hearts' Stay Cool Over Big Fight

By HARRISON CARROLL,
International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.—Myrna Loy, the girl who rooted for Max Baer to beat Primo Carnera in their motion picture, "The Prizefighter and the Lady," doesn't care whose hand they raise in the real title bout tomorrow night.

Cold alike to the memory of Max's screen love-making and of the bold eyes he made at her off the set, she won't even place a bet on the California battler. She said today:

"All that boomerang publicity has been very disappointing. I think Max should win, but the fight has lost interest to me. I don't care now who ends up with the title."

While last minute betting shows the same surprising sluggishness—surprising when you consider what a ballyhoo both the boys got during their stay here—the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer fight fans worked up enough enthusiasm to dig "The Prizefighter and the Lady" film out of the vaults and run it off in a projection-room—a sort of last minute sizing up of the fighters as they appeared in their mock battle.

Lupe Velez, who had a sensational run-in with Baer and who was shooting Carnera earlier in the year, now snaps her fingers at the big fight and says she won't even place a bet. And neither will Johnny Weissmuller. But the fiery little star exclaimed:

"But here's what will happen and you mark my words. Carnera will take a quick nose dive, collect his $200,000, go back to Italy and live happily ever after. He's been champion for a year, hasn't he? And been broke all the time? Why should he keep it up?"

WIDOW DENYING KISS IN AUTO WINS SUIT

Man Named Joins In Disclaimer of Embrace

Mrs. Margaret Stevenson, widow of A. W. Stevenson, South Hills realtor, won a jury verdict in Common Pleas Court yesterday after denying she was kissed by Thomas B. Carmichael, Millvale avenue, just before an accident in which two women companions were injured.

Mrs. Emilie McC. Beadling, of Dormont, and Mrs. Raymond A. Turpen, of Brooklyn, formerly of this city, brought suits against Mrs. Stevenson for $110,000 damages for injuries.

Mrs. Turpen testified Carmichael had kissed Mrs. Stevenson shortly before the accident, and had his arm around her. This both Mrs. Stevenson and Carmichael denied.

Mrs. Stevenson claimed that the accident was caused by her car skidding on an oiled and rain-soaked road. The rear end of the car ran into a truck. She testified both injured women went to a hospital at Bedford, O., near where the accident occurred July 21, 1930, and that a doctor there said it was "all foolishness about the women being hurt," and declared they might as well continue their journey to Cleveland.

Mrs. Stevenson, asked on cross-examination if Carmichael had kissed her, said he had not. Asked whether he had kissed her at any time, she said his conduct toward her had been honorable at all times.

Mrs. Turpen asked $60,000 and Mrs. Beadling $50,000 in suits which were tried together.

Mrs. Beadling testified she had 32 stitches placed in her arm. Both women said they sustained broken pelvic bones.

Mrs. Stevenson testified that shortly before the accident one of the women spoke of the wonderful time she was having, and remarked that she had "wished herself" on Mrs. Stevenson.

Tabloid Vendors Paroled by Court

Accused of possessing and selling obscene literature, Morris Lazarwitz, 1207 Gibbon street, and Charles Rodgers, of 703 Lockhart street, were placed on parole for two years today by Judge M. A. Musmanno in Criminal Court. George Bonder, 1206 Forbes street, was paroled for nine months on the same charges.

The men were arrested two months ago for distributing a tabloid newspaper here.

GIRL'S DEATH MYSTERY

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—(AP.)—Vernon B. Shelters, a salesman for an automobile agency in Orange, drove his automobile into Newark early today from Morris County with the body of a young woman on the seat beside him, and told police her manner of death was as much a mystery to him as it was to the authorities.

A preliminary examination by Assistant Essex County Medical Examiner Carmine Berardinelli revealed the girl had a broken neck, a possible fracture of the skull and several broken ribs.

The young woman, Eleanor Coleman, 23, was a stenographer employed in the same office as Shelters and had gone for a drive with him last night.

He said they went to a roadhouse and on the way home she alighted from the car while he waited. She did not return when he expected her and upon investigating, he said, he found her body lying in the road.

CAR GONE, MAN FOUND IN DITCH

With his skull fractured and a vertebra in his neck broken, Carl Wallman, 29, of 856 Kirkbride street, North Side, was found perhaps fatally injured today in a ditch alongside Babcock boulevard in Ross Township.

Mystery veiled how he was injured as he was taken to Allegheny General Hospital.

In the ditch alongside the injured man, police found his hat, a woman's hat and pocketbook, and tracks which indicated an automobile had crashed into the ditch.

The automobile had vanished. There was nothing in the pocketbook to identify its owner, the police said.

On his way to the hospital, Wallman, despite his injuries, was able to tell police that he had been out last night with a man he knew as "Cy Logan." He could not recall what had happened.

Fires House Because He Dislikes Owner

WILLIAMSPORT, June 13.—(AP.)—He "didn't like" Isaac Keebler, so, police say, Wayne Walter, 16, of Jersey Shore, ransacked Keebler's home near Montoursville, poured kerosene over the woodwork and set fire to the place.

Walter was arrested yesterday after the fire was extinguished.

BANKER ESTATE DATA APPROVED

A final account in distribution of the estate of Anne Chalfant Mitchell, wife of the late Walter Mitchell, vice president of the Mellon National Bank, was approved in Orphans' Court today.

The account showed a balance for distribution of $98,423. Previous distributions have been made.

Mrs. Mitchell died in 1929, leaving an estate of $3,027,530. Her husband was the chief beneficiary, but he died the following year. Under the distribution approved today, the money goes principally to the estate of the husband.

Child Falls to Death Under Moving Truck

Crushed under the wheels of a truck when he attempted to climb into the driver's seat, 8-year-old Andrew Bowers, of Gibsonia, was killed today, according to a Coroner's report. Paul Cook, 33, of 8 Lane road, Richland Township, was the driver of the truck, the report said.

Death Rides 'L' as Wife, Spared, Kills Husband

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP.)—A Bronx Park express, brakes screeching, slid to a standstill at the Ninth street "L" platform last night freighted with death.

In the quick minutes between the Houston and Ninth street stations the tragedy of Joseph Collucci and his wife, Mary, had reached its lurid denouement.

First, as the train pulled out of Houston street station, there were only words. Collucci, who had been living apart from his wife, raged at her. Suddenly someone cried:

"He's got a gun!"

Pandemonium wracked the car. A woman fainted. The train roared on.

A man, Samuel Lauria, who knew the Colluccis, leaped forward to interfere. He reached for Collucci's pistol. Simultaneously the train lurched.

A bullet plowed into the car ceiling.

Collucci, free from Lauria's grasp, flashed a knife, driving it along the side of Lauria's head. Lauria slumped against a car seat.

Mary Collucci had dropped to the floor, clutching among the shuffling feet of the frightened passengers for something. She found it. When she straightened up the gun was in her hand. She aimed it at the man by whom she had had 17 children in a long and stormy married life.

A bullet that—but for Lauria's interference—might have been meant for her, tore into the side of her husband's head. He slumped to the car floor, dying.

The train stopped. Police pushed forward.

On the platform, waiting for a train, was a 13-year-old girl. She saw Mrs. Collucci. She rushed forward. Mary Collucci didn't wait for the girl to speak.

She said in a voice that was shrill but surprisingly calm:

"I have just killed your father."

Then they took her away, and stretcher bearers came for her husband, who was to die within a few hours, and for Lauria, the peacemaker, who will recover.

And the Bronx express roared on.

Deafness Forces Hero To Quit Detective Post

The hero of a stabbing affray six years ago, Precinct Detective Edward Pritchard today had resigned from the police force.

Pritchard said he resigned because he had been refused a transfer from the homicide division, where he was unable to work effectively. He said his hearing was impaired when he was stabbed by a Negro in 1928, and he was unable to use telephones as is required in the detective service.

In 1928 Pritchard rescued a girl who was seized in the Woods Run district by two Negroes. He captured one of the Negroes and was stabbed six times. Despite his injuries, he subdued the prisoner and guarded him from an angry crowd.

Pritchard was commended for his bravery by Common Pleas Court Judge George V. Moore and others. He was confined to a hospital for 14 weeks.

He entered the police service in 1919 as a patrolman and is not eligible for the pension list.

Pritchard was transferred to the homicide division on June 1. He said he was able to perform all his duties, except in use of telephones.

SPANISH VETS ELECTING NEW OFFICERS

CONNEAUT LAKE, June 13.—United Spanish War Veterans, attending their thirtieth annual encampment, were electing Pennsylvania department officers today. The encampment will conclude with brief business sessions tomorrow.

The race for state commander was between E. Morris De Cann of Philadelphia, and Joseph A. Heineman, of Butler.

Franklin J. Connoly, of Wilkinsburg, as the sole nominee, was assured of election as senior vice commander. John W. Collins, of Pittsburgh, and Charles Malcolm, of Sharon, were nominated for junior vice commander. Martin Knuth, of Scranton, was chosen department chaplain.

At a mass meeting yesterday Robert G. Woodside, Controller of Allegheny County and former commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, condemned the loss of Spanish War veterans' pensions in recent economy legislation. He also urged vigorous measures to combat communistic propaganda.

E. Lowry Humes and W. J. Best, the latter department commander, both of Pittsburgh, also spoke.

Suit Up Again

MME. YVONNE COTNAREANU

GIRL, 11, SUES STEPMOTHER

ATLANTA, June 13.—(AP.)—An 11-year-old girl, today had filed suit for $10,000 against her stepmother of three days charging alienation of her father's affections.

The suit was brought by Martha Louise Bridwell through a "next friend," her mother, Mrs. Louise Bridwell, and seeks damage from Mrs. Justine Mitchell Bridwell who now, says the suit, is on a honeymoon with the girl's father, Max M. Bridwell.

The petition charges that Martha Louise, until she was about five years old, enjoyed the "love, affection and support" of her father, but that he gradually abandoned them. The petition further charges that her stepmother was responsible for the abandonment.

Mrs. Louise Bridwell obtained a final decree of divorce in 1932. She also asked that her former husband be held in contempt of court for alleged failure to pay $700 back alimony granted at the time of her divorce.

McKees Rocks, Stowe Twp. Schools Picnic

The annual picnic of McKees Rocks and Stowe Township schools will be held in Kennywood Park tomorrow. McKees Rocks Elks Lodge, No. 1263, will conduct a Flag Day program at the bandstand at 5 p. m.

PARTIES 2 TO 1 IN TOWNSHIPS

The ratio of registered Republicans to Democrats in the boroughs and townships has changed from approximately four to one, to two to one, incomplete figures revealed today.

The new registration gave the boroughs and townships some 187,000 Republicans and 98,000 Democrats. The former registration, which represented the full quota from a general election, showed 222,000 Republicans and 64,000 Democrats.

Taxpayers League Lists Two Meetings

Meetings of taxpayers will be held in Homestead and Clairton tonight. The meeting in Homestead will be held under auspices of the Homestead Property Owners Association in the Homestead High School. The Clairton meeting will be held in the Wilson Municipal Building.

DEGREE GIVEN PITTSBURGHER

Edwin Whittier Smith, Pittsburgh attorney, has received an honorary degree of doctor of laws at Allegheny College. The presentation was made yesterday at Meadville, Pa.

Mr. Smith was admitted to the Allegheny County bar in 1881 following his graduation from Yale University. He has been active in civic affairs, serving as a trustee of the Children's Service Bureau and as vice president of the Welfare Fund.

He is a member of the law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay and is president of the South Hills Trust Company.

Four Pittsburghers were among the 4,000 students who graduated from New York University today. They are Marian S. Holmes, of 1716 Murray avenue; Elizabeth K. Zimmerli, 825 Boggs avenue; Edward Tomlin Crowder, 585 Forest avenue, and L. D. Lassenberry, of 3979 Brandon road.

Three Pittsburghers were in the class at Pennsylvania Military College, Chester, Pa., at commencement exercises there yesterday. They were William A. and Joseph A. Pivirotta, and Samuel D. Worton.

170 Get Diplomas At Catholic High

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle of the Pittsburgh Catholic diocese, distributed diplomas to 170 graduates of the Boys' Catholic High School in the school auditorium last night. Dr. W. N. St. Peter of the University of Pittsburgh, delivered the commencement address.

COTY TO FIGHT EX-WIFE'S SUIT

WILMINGTON, Del., June 13.—(AP.)—William H. Foulk, local attorney, entered appearance in Superior Court yesterday for Francois Coty, of Paris, in the $13,000,000 suit filed against Coty by his divorced wife, Madame Yvonne Alexandrine Cotnareanu.

In view of the appearance, an order for the amount of the judgement to be fixed by a jury of inquisition was rescinded. The suit will now proceed as other actions, an answer on behalf of Coty to be filed during the summer. This is the only one of five suits against him here in which Coty has entered an appearance.

Madame Cotnareanu alleges that that the amount claimed is due her under agreements entered into when she and her husband were divorced.

Ice for Needy Left Up to Relief Board

City Council is preparing to spend another $450,000 out of $1,700,000 remaining in a relief bond issue. In answer to a request for ice made by unemployed organizations, a committee of Council has recommended that furnishing of ice be left to the discretion of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board and that it be given in cases of sickness or where there are infants in the home.

MAN UNDER BED LANDS IN CELL

Center Avenue police had in their custody today a man they said they caught under a bed in a Webster avenue home and were searching for a companion reported to have escaped when he was surprised crawling through a window in the house.

Clarence Zeman, of 2838 Webster avenue, told police he heard a noise in the rear of his home and, investigating, saw a Negro attempting to enter through a window, he told police. He grabbed the intruder by the sweater, but he fled as the garment was pulled from him.

An hour later, Zeman's 8-year-old son was preparing to go to bed. He heard a noise under his bed and called his father. The latter looked under the bed and saw a young Negro. Police were called and took the intruder into custody. Held on a disorderly conduct charge, he gave his name as William Johnston, 18, of 20 Kearney way.

Ethel Waters Aids Benefit Show Here

Ethel Waters, noted Negro blues singer, will head a benefit performance in the Nixon Theater Sunday night, when Pittsburgh Negroes will open their part in the nation-wide campaign to raise $1,000,000 defense fund for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The theater management announced today that the theater box office will be open Friday for the sale of tickets to regular theatergoers. The general sale of tickets will be the following day.

BOROUGH PAY AGAIN HELD UP

Borough employes of McKees Rocks today faced another payless pay day in the administration fight between Burgess P. J. Henny and the Borough Council over taxes and budget.

Even though Council overrode the Burgess' veto of the ordinance bill which provides for salaries, Controller D. J. Buckley said he would not issue the pay vouchers because the Burgess had not signed the ordinance.

Burgess Henny told Council he vetoed the ordinance bill because it included salaries and fixed taxes, which he contended should be provided for in separate bills.

Council spent two hours arguing the case of Patrolman Victor Jednack, suspended by the Burgess sometime ago for "assaulting" him. Council wanted the policeman reinstated with back pay. Burgess Henny said he was ready to "fight" before he would reinstate the patrolman.

Live Stock Men Here Launch Campaign

Seventy-five meat packers and live stock commission brokers at a meeting last night in the Keystone Hotel laid plans for a campaign to build up live stock business in Pittsburgh through advertising and acquainting housewives with new meat products.

Daniel W. Martin, of the National Live Stock and Meat Board of Chicago; R. H. Flinn, of the Pennsylvania Railroad; A. L. Doggett of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and W. H. Rush, of the Pittsburgh Live Stock Exchange, spoke.

HEART SURGERY HELD POSSIBLE BY DOCTOR

CLEVELAND, June 13.—(AP.)—A new type of heart surgery, promising one avenue of escape from the present tremendous heart death rate in the United States, was proposed to the American Medical Association today by Claude S. Beck, Cleveland surgeon.

He pictures surgeons in the near future operating directly upon hearts. The hearts will be patched literally, he predicted, with grafts of tissue taken from other parts of the body.

Flattened hearts will be straightened. Leaking heart valves will be closed. Torn hearts will be sewn up. The surgery which will do this with comparative safety, without stopping the heart, is already in the experimental stage.

NEW FIELD OPENED

In making these predictions Dr. Beck enumerated heart injuries which he said the medical profession has scarcely begun to recognize.

These heart troubles, he said, come from collisions, falls or blows. Little attention has been paid in the past to such accidents as the sources of heart trouble. The emphasis has been confined largely to hearts penetrated by sharp instruments or by bullets.

Because the heart is apparently so well protected by the ribs and chest bone, he said, few persons think it may be bruised. Yet he said there "can be little doubt that the heart is the recipient of many injuries."

BLAMES BRUISES

Some of these hurts, he argued, have produced symptoms which were mistakenly attributed to disease, instead of to a bruise. He told of a golfer who was struck over the heart recently by a golf ball. Three days later this man developed angina pectoris.

Foremost medical men, Dr. Beck said, held that this angina had no relation to the golf ball. With this opinion he disagreed emphatically. Another case was a man kicked in the chest by a colt when 4 years old. All his life this man had suffered from a bad heart. Lately X-rays and other up-to-date diagnosis showed a flattened heart, due to the kick.

Surgery in childhood, Dr. Beck said, would have straightened that heart, and probably made it sound again.

Flat-Chested Men Most Healthy, Doctors Told

By CORINNE HARDESTY
Universal Service.

CLEVELAND, O., June 13.—Men who like to throw out their chests and pound them loudly to show what great big he-men they are, are in for disillusionment.

The flat chest, not the rounded one that thrusts out so impressively, is the healthy chest, contrary to deep-rooted notions, Dr. S. A. Weisman, of Minneapolis, declared yesterday at the American Medical Association meeting here.

Basing his observations on studies of 18,555 Minneapolis students between the ages of 5 and 18, Dr. Weisman said:

"The most significant aspect of these studies, besides correcting the notion held by public and the medical profession that the flat chest is unhealthy, is the light they throw on chest development.

"Sixty per cent of the total flattening of the chest takes place in the first year of life. Between the ages of 5 and 18 there is little change in chest development. This means that if the chest does not flatten out before the age of six, from the rounded chest of first inspiration, it is up to parents and doctors to find out what is wrong. This is the time to discover and correct a tubercular condition."

Dr. Weisman said his studies are a definite challenge to pediatricians. He dealt the killing blow to the big chesters when he said:

"The rounded chest—that is, the deep chest, always a source of pride—is really an infantile chest.

"The average male tubercular patient has a chest of 15 per cent greater depth than the normal male chest."

Doctors as well as the uninitiated have been muddled about the matter of deep chests.

Prospective Mothers Aided by Crawling

CLEVELAND, June 13.—(AP.)—By spending about an hour a day on their hands and knees, the posture which evolution ascribes to human ancestors, some prospective mothers at Youngstown, O., have been almost entirely relieved of one of the common ills of motherhood.

These ills are infections in the tract below the kidneys. They usually clear up unaided after the baby arrives, but have been an annoyance lasting for months, and sometimes considered as unavoidable penalties of motherhood.

The new treatment is shown at the scientific exhibit of the American Medical Association by Dr. John S. Lewis, Jr., and Dr. E. C. Baker, of the Youngstown Hospital Association. They have worked on this infection problem for several years.

The experiment has been made with a few women. They spend an hour to not more than two hours daily in the all-fours position. The posture is not continuous, but at intervals. It has given relief throughout the whole period so often subject to infection.

Chicago Opens Drive On 'White Plague'

CHICAGO, June 13.—(AP.)—Convinced of the efficiency of B. C. G. tuberculosis vaccine, Chicago officials moved today to inaugurate a campaign for treatment of every child and citizen in efforts to make them immune from the white plague.

Mayor Kelly approved a $1 a year lease by the city on the Rockefeller McCormick Institute to be used for the manufacture of B. C. G., a vaccine developed at the Pasteur Institute in France and object of experimentation here.

CITY OBSERVING BIRTHDAY OF FLAG

Flag Day will be observed throughout the Pittsburgh district tomorrow in commemoration of the one hundred and fifty-seventh anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the national emblem.

Flag week was officially opened at Valley Forge, Pa., Sunday when William T. Kerr, former Pittsburgher, presided at patriotic exercises held on the site of Washington's historic camp grounds.

Mr. Kerr founded the American Flag Day Association in 1898 while a school boy in this city and is still national president of the association.

Radio talks in observance of the holiday will be given here tomorrow over WCAE by Col. Franklin Blackstone; over KDKA by the Rev. C. W. Maus and over WWSW by Dr. J. W. Anthony.

The Rev. Maus, who is pastor of the Long Run Presbyterian Church, will be the principal speaker at the annual celebration of the Pittsburgh chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium at 12:15 p. m.

The Herron Hill Junior High School Band will give a free concert at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Playground at 7:30 p. m.

Flag Day exercises will be conducted at the University of Pittsburgh tomorrow. Headmaster Guy H. Baskerville will speak on the history of the flag and Mrs. Mabel B. Cunningham will read an original poem.

DR. ZOOK SPEAKS AT DUQUESNE

Dr. George Frederick Zook, director of the American Council of Education, will address the fifty-sixth annual graduating classes of Duquesne University at exercises in Memorial Hall tonight.

Degrees will be conferred on 270. Honorary degrees will be conferred on Dr. Zook, Bishop James Hugh Ryan, rector of the Catholic University of America, who preached the Baccalaureate sermon, and State Senator Frank J. Harris. Each will receive the doctor of laws.

Bishop Hugh Charles Boyle, of the Pittsburgh Diocese, Chancellor of the University, will present the degrees. Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president of Duquesne, will preside.

COUNCIL TO SEE GARBAGE SITES

Three more sites for incinerators have been suggested and are to be inspected today by City Council.

Location of a plant on ground adjoining the city's pumping station at Brilliant has been protested by James H. Kennon, engineer in the Bureau of Water, because it would block further expansion of the pumping plant.

The three new sites, suggested by L. W. Monteverde, are two tracts in Preble avenue near Island avenue, North Side, and one at Ridge avenue, near Chateau street.

One Preble avenue site, owned by the American Steel and Wire Company, includes three and three-quarter acres at an estimated cost of $187,500. The other Preble avenue site, 200x350 feet, would cost $80,000. The Ridge avenue site is also priced at $80,000.

Honor New Dictator At Moose Initiation

City and county officials and visiting lodgemen will attend an initiation by Pittsburgh Lodge No. 46, Loyal Order of Moose, in Moose Temple tomorrow night. The class will be initiated in honor of Dr. Frank C. Blessing, new dictator. A membership banquet will be held at the Hofbrau Restaurant, Graeme street, Saturday night.

PRESIDENT ACTS TO BAR STEEL WALKOUT

workers in an industry if its membership were larger than that of company unions.

FRIENDLY TO LABOR

Another section, friendly to organized labor, reaffirmed in stronger language the labor-protecting clauses of Section 7-A of the National Recovery Act.

These provisions gave labor the right to elect representatives of their own choice; prohibited management from trying to influence workers in the choice of their union affiliations or the election of their representatives, and gave the workers specifically the right to help organize or join the union of their choice.

The penalty clause applied particular to this section. The suggested penalty would be a $1,960 fine for any violation of the provisions.

About 15 Republican Senators attended the secret conference at which the bill was discussed. All were pledged to secrecy.

One Republican Senator declared his immediate opposition to the new bill, saying:

"It was very nebulous. I regard it as delegating vast and only partially described powers to the President. In effect it would give Mr. Roosevelt the authority to do whatever he pleases to do in a labor dispute. I think this bill will have to be explained quite a bit before it can get our support."

Steel Institute Group Meets in New York

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP.)—Members of the executive committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute met today at the institute's headquarters.

At the offices of the institute it was stated that the session was the usual monthly meeting of the committee, which is always held the day before the monthly meeting of the board of directors.

In other quarters observers voiced the opinion that, while the threat of a strike in the industry probably would come up for discussion today, no action from the committee was expected. In this connection it was pointed out that the leaders in the industry determined its position last week, when it was transmitted to Gen. Johnson, NRA administrator, in Washington.

WEIRTON SUIT TRIAL DATE SET

International News Service.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 13.—The federal government's equity suit against the Weirton Steel Company for alleged violation of the National Recovery Act will be heard in United States District Court here, beginning September 5.

Judge John P. Nields fixed that date for the forthcoming trial in concluding a brief court session today during which it was openly charged by the steel concern's representatives that its employes are being intimidated by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, an American Federation of Labor union.

The accusation was voiced by Earl S. Reed, of Pittsburgh, chief counsel for Weirton Steel. Workers, prepared to testify in support of the company, Reed alleged, are being placed on the "unfair list" by the union.

Replying to the assertion of Reed, James Lawrence Fly, chief counsel for the government in the historic Weirton struggle, whose ultimate outcome promises to play a major part in determining the constitutionality of the NRA, said:

"If such acts of intimidation have occurred, they have been carried on without the knowledge of the government."

Fly declared he will take the matter under advisement at the earliest possible date, and, if the alleged intimidation is found to have occurred, he will refer his facts to the Department of Justice.

Railroad Pension Bill Wins Approval

WASHINGTON, June 13—(INS.)—The House Interstate Commerce Committee today ordered a favorable report on the bill by Representative Crosser (Dem.), of Ohio, establishing a pension system for railroad workers, similar measure is before the Senate.

Under the bill, maximum retirement pensions are fixed at $100 monthly.

Doubt Legality Of Steel Strike Under Contracts

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 13.—(AP.)—Discussion of the legality of a steel strike before July 1 under the contract between the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and certain steel companies took place today among members of the union.

The contract provides no strike shall be called until expiration of the period covered by the contract, even though new lodges are formed which do not have contracts. The union has a wage contract with a number of employers, including Republic Steel Corporation for its sheet mill at Niles. The scale does not expire until June 30.

Gary Workers Satisfied, Company Officials Say

GARY, Ind., June 13.—(AP.)—Managers of two Gary steel mills today pointed to the results of a ballot among the workers as indicating their men were satisfied with the company unions and would not strike to obtain representation by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

In the Gary works of the Illinois Steel Company the employes cast 9,635 votes in nominating candidates to head the company unions. The company said 11,477 workers were eligible to vote. In the South works of the company, only 6,928 cast valid ballots out of 11,158 eligible to vote, but the managers said an unannounced number of ballots were illegible or improper and said 85 per cent of the workers had voted.

Eighteen members of the workmen's council representing employes of the Inland Steel Company plant, Indiana Harbor, issued a statement saying:

"The workmen's council of Inland Steel Company employes advises herewith that as a result of recenting balloting it is its firm belief that 90 per cent of the Inland Steel workers do not desire to interrupt the present status of satisfactory conditions by a strike."

Steubenville Workers Opposed to Strike

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 13.—(AP.)—Steel workers in the Steubenville area overwhelmingly oppose a strike in the industry, company union votes taken in a half dozen plants indicated today.

Workers in the Follansbee Brothers, plants at Follansbee, W. Va., and Toronto, O., voted almost unanimously against a proposal to demand that they be given a 10 per cent wage increase to bring them up to the wage level of steel workers elsewhere. The plants are in receivership and steel company officials said they probably would be closed if the workers insisted on the 10 per cent wage boost.

The 2,500 workers in the Mingo Junction plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, last week voted 99.2 per cent against a strike, union officials said. In both the Wheeling Steel plant here and at Weirton, the vote against striking was about 95 per cent, a statement signed by workers' representatives of the company union said. The two plants employ about 15,000.

GAS WORKERS TO HOLD POLL

Gasoline station attendants will hold an election to determine who shall represent them in further negotiations with oil company officials.

At a conference late yesterday in the Fort Pitt Hotel, attended by representatives of seven oil companies, David Williams, of the American Federation of Labor, and Robert W. Zollinger, president of the Gas Station Employes' Union, it was agreed to hold the election.

A telegram has been dispatched to the United States Department of Labor requesting that Fred Keightley be assigned by the department to act as supervisor of the election, according to Elden Young, attorney for the Gulf Refining Company. Young, acting spokesman for those attending yesterday's conference, said that Keightley had served as mediator in the recent dispute between Cleveland gasoline station employes and their employers. A definite date has not been set for the election.

Oil companies represented at yesterday's meeting, according to Young, were Gulf, Shell, Pennzoil, Freedom, Pure-Oil, Vacuum and Miller.

TIGHE REFUSES TO PRESENT U. S. PLAN

tend the convention and will not send a representative.

Tighe made it clear that the men would welcome "any plan from the government" and added:

"Last Sunday on my return from Washington I wrote Gen. Johnson reminding him of the seriousness of the situation and urging him to attend the convention."

Throughout the Pittsburgh area today and tonight the various lodges of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers were instructing their delegates to the convention, which will open here tomorrow.

SECRET ORDERS

Union leaders said instructions the delegates would recognize were based on the results of secret balloting being conducted today.

Meanwhile, reports flew thick and fast concerning the "showdown" on union recognition by the steel industry.

Results of the "company union" primary elections in the various mills of the district were made public and in at least one plant charges of intimidation were made.

"NOT ADVOCATING STRIKE"

The charges were made by Spang, who said:

"Reports came into me today that the men were told by the bosses to go and vote at the company union elections, but so far as the reports are concerned in the voting, the steel workers of Duquesne are opposed to company unions.

"The men have been coming all day long reporting that fact. The will stand for nothing else but the Amalgamated Association, and if it is necessar, the steel workers will strike, but we don't advocate a strike."

3,717 to 31

Out of 4,319 eligible to vote at the Duquesne works, according to a Carnegie Steel Company announcement, 3,717 voted and only three votes were cast for Spang. This represents, according to the company, a total of 86 per cent of the employes in favor of the "company union" plan.

The total vote announced by the Carnegie Steel Company was 24,760 out of 28,413 employes eligible at nine plants. This was interpreted to mean that 87 per cent of the total number of employes favored the "representation plan."

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation announced that 89.7 per cent of its eligible employes at the Pittsburgh works voted for the employe representation plan, "after deductions for mutilated, illegible, and otherwise invalidated ballots." At the Aliquippa works, the percentage after similar deductions was 86.5.

At the Pittsburgh works seven votes were cast for an "outside union" and at Aliquippa two favored the outside union.

OTHER RESULTS

Other company "primary results, after deductions for invalidated ballots, were announced by the companies as follows:

Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company, Midland, 86 per cent of 3,253 eligibles voted for employe representation plan; American Sheet and Tinplate Company, 92 per cent; Central Tube Company, Ambridge, 79 per cent; National Tube Company, 89 per cent; Wheeling Steel Corporation, 71 per cent. According to word received from Johnstown, 95 per cent of the employes in the Bethlehem Steel Company's Cambria plant voted against a strike.

At McKeesport a handbill was being distributed to employes of the National Tube Company today "discussing" the proposed strike. The circular was similar to one distributed to employes of the Carnegie Steel Company last week and called attention to the many advantages of the employes' "representation plan" and branded the Steel and Metal Workers' Industrial Union communistic in its aims and beliefs.

CIRCULAR CHARGES

Of the Amalgamated, the circular stated:

"We feel that the Amalgamated, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, with less than 10 per cent of the steel workers enrolled as its members, hopes to force a closed shop on the industry. The Amalgamated is not incorporated and has no legal or financial responsibility nor does it account publicly for the many thousands of dollars which it collects."

Tighe Scores Communist Agitators

Amalgamated Head Calls Own Union Peace-Seeking

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

Communists who are "stirring things up" in the threatened national steel strike are out of step with Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America.

"Mike" Tighe made that evident in an interview today. He declared his organization, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, "is an American institution from the ground up."

He said the Amalgamated Association emphatically repudiates the "boring from within" of the Communists and under no conditions will it "disgrace itself" by consorting, or permitting its members to consort, with "this disloyal, mongrel group."

STRIKE PROBLEM

Whether there will be a steel strike—vitally affecting the entire nation—Tighe could not predict. Asked point-blank if he thought the strike would come off, he replied:

"I couldn't tell you that. I don't know the temper of the men. It all depends upon the men themselves. It is for them to say."

Tighe, a veteran union leader, is now at a crisis in his career. For 15 years he has been president of the Amalgamated. He has spent 57 years in the labor movement. A man of about 72, quiet mannered, who has never used tobacco in any form nor drank liquor, he has a strong following in the union ranks—especially among the members of long standing. Some of the younger element think he is too conservative.

In Tighe's own organization there is an element known as the "rank and filers" who are clamoring for aggressive leadership against the powerful steel magnates in the bitter trade battle which is fast coming to a head. They are playing a leading role in pushing the steel workers toward a strike on June 16 which would vitally affect the entire nation and perhaps materially retard President Roosevelt's economic recovery program.

SCORES COMMUNISTS

Outside his organization is a labor union which is demanding "action" and "unity" and which Tighe flatly brands as "Communistic." This organization is known as the Steel and Metal Workers' Union, the national president of which is E. Patrick Cush, and the national secretary, James Egan. Tighe said:

"We expelled Paddy Cush from our union seven or eight years ago because of his Communistic activities. He was a member of the North Side Lodge, No. 76."

Tighe was asked how strong is the "rank and file" element within his own organization. He said he did not know, adding:

"They represent their local unions in various districts. I suppose the local unions have been pushing them."

He had no apology or kind words, however, for the Steel and Metal Workers' Union, declaring:

"They are a Communistic aggregation and we don't recognize them. The Communistic rabble do not think very much of me. They are always saying that 'Mike Tighe is a company man—he'll sell you out.' They are always steaming things up."

Tighe, in denouncing the "un-American" propaganda of the Communists during labor controversies, called attention to "a warning against Communism" which he and other officials of the Amalgamated Association sent to its membership.

AMALGAMATED LOYAL

Repudiating the advances of the Communists, Tighe's warning reminded the membership that the Amalgamated Association has no room for Communistic doctrines, adding that the Amalgamated is an American institution —"loyal to the core to its government and its traditions." Tighe declared:

"Communism, and all such isms, has no part in the makeup of the Amalgamated Association."

Tighe made it apparent during the interview with the writer that he is approaching in a calm frame of mind the special convention in Pittsburgh tomorrow of the Amalgamated Association, during which the strike crisis will be discussed. This convention was called following the collapse of negotiations in Washington. At the meeting Tighe will present to the delegations the proposal made at Washington that a special board of three members be created to rule on the labor problems arising in the steel industry.

Concluding the interview, Tighe pointed out that one of the "cardinal principles" of the Amalgamated is "conciliation." There was nothing "diligerent in his attitude. He indicated his future course would depend entirely upon the attitude of the members of his union.

Knickerbocker Crashes London Exchange and 'Sees' Big Boom

Learns of Huge Stock Value Gains In 2 Years

(Editor's Note—"Nit upstory" is the rule in the London Stock Exchange, but H. R. Knickerbocker, star foreign correspondent of International News Service, wanted to see the workings of that body, so he donned a silk "topper" and crashed the doors successfully, as he tells in the third article of his series on British recovery.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

LONDON, June 13.—Hatless, coatless, collarless, shirtless, the bruised and indignant body of a gentleman who had been well dressed a few minutes before was propelled into Throgmorton street.

"Come again," jeered a swarm of other gentlemen in morning coats, "and bring your grandmother next time," added one of them.

The gentlemen in morning coats were stockbrokers. The gentleman on the pavement of Throgmorton street had just paid them an unauthorized visit on the floor of the London Stock Exchange. He picked himself up and departed, glad to have retained at least his trousers.

That is what happens to visitors—to any strangers who, ill-advised, attempt to violate the sacred precincts of that ancient and exclusive body of traders. Their first rule is no admittance. Their second rule is the bum's rush for any who violate rule number one.

CLUE TO TREND

The bruised and indignant gentleman was the last stranger but one to visit the floor of the exchange. The last visitor was your correspondent.

For in an investigation into British recovery one essential starting point is the London Stock Exchange. The history of economic depression and of economic recovery gives a leading role to the stock market. They are the first to scent the trend of business. Their nose for the way business is going to go points the way long before business has taken it.

To all this my friends the stock brokers in the partners' room of one of the oldest London firms agree. But their views on the desirability of piloting a stranger through the exchange were not unanimous.

An elderly broker said:

"You will be spotted at once."

"You don't look like a member and you don't look like a clerk."

DIREFUL PREDICTION

Said a third:

"When they spot you they will yell 'Louisville' and then they will surround you and dance a war dance, and then tear your clothes off and throw you into the street. And if one of us has been seen with you we will be hauled up before the committee and disciplined. You see it's not like your New York Exchange. There isn't any visitors gallery and there is no such thing as getting permission to go through and it does you no good to have a friendly broker with you."

A fourth, young and Irish, exclaimed:

"Never mind. Come on here, try this topper."

He handed me a top hat. It was too small. It balanced precariously. The net effect was to make the wearer look like a comedy hoofer.

The Irish broker said:

"You'll do. Stick close to me. We will talk business to each other. Don't stare about. At the door we rush right in. Don't even look at the guards."

MUTTERS PASSWORD

Down a gloomy lane we hastened, emerged on Throgmorton street, and dived through the swinging doors in the red granite face of the institution which has been the home and barometer of crises and recoveries since modern business was born.

"Four thousand members," muttered my companion as we brushed past the guards and were suddenly overwhelmed with the chatter of a thousand voices.

Light streamed down dimly from a huge dome. It streamed on a vast concourse of men, mostly young or middle-aged, only a few old ones, but all ruddy faced, healthy looking and seemingly possessed of great sociability. They stood about in groups and appeared to be exchanging anecdotes.

Their leisure is perhaps only apparent, but the fact is that a broker in Throgmorton street can frequently cable, execute and receive confirmation of a transaction done in his own exchange. Three minutes from the time of cabling New York to the time of receiving confirmation of execution is no unusual record.

EYED CURIOUSLY

One or two brokers eyed my topper curiously. We made haste. There were at least 1,000 men on the floor, but it was a quiet day. They may have been smilingly reflecting on their profits, for as one journal has expressed it, "good news has been so frequent it is almost a bore."

Since June 1932 the value of 365 representative stocks on the London exchange has increased $6,500,000,000. That is certainly a smiling matter.

Here on this very spot, explained my companion as we crossed the center of the floor, was the financial heart of the world. Maybe New York would have a reply to that. But the bloodstreams of business flow through this place from more remote corners of the globe and the streams are more numerous.

Here they trade in more than 5,500 different stocks and bonds officially listed, and in another 3,500 unofficially listed, a total of almost 9,000 issues of every conceivable variety, and from every cranny on earth. When the London Exchange is looking up it means that a good part of the world is looking up.

Every day the exchange publishes a list of its securities in two newspaper-size journals, and the daily list runs to 32 pages. New York's total stock and bond transactions, including the curb, can normally be contained on five newspaper pages with a listing of a maximum of around 2,500 issues.

STOCKS LOOKING UP

Dignified gentlemen around the crowd market ignored us as we pushed past them to the kaffirs, African shares. We passed the Indians and the Dominions, redolent of empire. We skirted the special posts for rubber stocks, tea and coffee, oil, railways, foreign stocks and bonds, electrics, shipping and so on, 28 great categories in all.

All of them, or practically all, are looking up. They have been looking up and climbing up for the last two years. No wonder the brokers seemed in good spirits. Long before the index of business activity showed a genuine rise in Britain the stock exchange had sensed the rise, anticipated it and now the brokers are enjoying the proof of the pudding by eating it.

Until the late autumn of 1932 business in Britain was still wallowing in the bottom of the trough. But in June, 1932, the market began to rise. The index for industrial shares rose steadily from a point just above 50 per cent of the level of 1928 to a point which is today around 90 per cent of that boom level.

We hurried along. Brokers jostled us. We jostled back, intently looking for somebody and hoping that nobody would look for us. We were conscious of the right this company had to exclude strangers. For the London Stock Exchange is a strictly private concern, a joint stock company itself. It is in a sense, engaged in business for profit and it makes a profit. It made a larger profit last year than ever since the boom year 1928-29. It is paying now its old top level dividend of $65 a share and its shares, available only to members, have risen in value from $675 in 1932 to $1,400 today, a pretty good index of British recovery.

In New York the cost of a seat on the exchange is sometimes an index to business. But the $130,000 that a New York seat costs today has no parallel in London. There there is an entrance fee of $3,000, an annual subscription of $500, the cost of the purchase of the seat of a deceased or retiring member, about $4,500, and the cost of the minimum three shares in the exchange, or $840, a total cost of not more than $8,000.

It is certain that London brokers average at least the $40,000 a year profit ascribed to New York brokers by Ferdinand Pecora, but it is certain that nobody will ever know the exact figure, because Parliament has never emulated the interest of Congress in the workings of the stronghold of capitalism.

At any rate they are earning enough to make them smile like cats that have been eating cream. Once my topper nearly fell off and it seemed to me that the smile of one broker showed a faint tendency to become Ugrish. My companion and I had a bad moment. We recovered the hat.

With one elbow backwards at the corner of man-eaters cheated of their prey we dashed through the swinging doors. The trip had been as successful as British recovery itself.

The stock exchange has certainly come back. It isn't booming. It is simply moving along like an English country squire jogging home to what? To real prosperity? Does the stock exchange really reflect the state of business? The next article will attempt an answer.

DEATH DELAYS TESTIMONIAL

Death of a brother of Miss Alice Stewart, superintendent of the Tuberculosis League Hospital, today had interrupted plans to honor her at a twenty-fifth anniversary dinner.

Miss Stewart became head of the hospital 25 years ago. A dinner in her honor was planned for last night at the Duquesne Club by the hospital directors, but Miss Stewart was informed Saturday of the death of her brother in Canada, and left at once for Hamilton, Ontario.

The dinner was postponed indefinitely.

PRINCES' SUIT POSTPONED

LOS ANGELES, June 13.—(AP.)—The trial of the Princess David and Serge M'Divani on charges of misappropriating funds of Pacific Shore Oil, while they were officials of the company, was postponed from June 25 to October 1 by agreement of counsel.

Attorneys for the princess advised the court they wished to get important documentary evidence from their brother Alexis, husband of Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, who was reported to be in Europe.

RIOTING SHAKES FRENCH RULE

PARIS, June 13.—(AP.)—Repeated demonstrations and disorders indicated today that the political truce government formed four months ago by Premier Gaston Doumergue was far from effective throughout France.

Despite Paris' recent warning that it would act sternly to suppress disorders, the Croix de Feu (Cross of Fire), a veterans' organization, continued its drive for "a national revolution" to reform the government.

Communists and Socialists, in a widespread "anti-Fascist" campaign, have resumed demonstrations in provincial cities, protesting Doumergue's policies.

Scores of cracked heads marked the latest flareup, at St. Etienne. Mounted police charged flaming barricades in the streets to disperse a mob of several thousand Communists and Socialists. A riot had developed following a meeting of the Croix de Feu.

Mail Bomb Injures Paris Postal Clerks

PARIS, June 13.—(AP.)—A parcel post bomb exploded in the hands of a mail sorter in a branch post office here today, injuring three postal clerks.

The package, addressed to the president of the Society of Authors and Composers, contained a bomb rigged up in a sardine box.

The society has been criticized in France for defending the right of Chancellor Hitler of Germany to present a pirated edition of his book "Mein Kampf" (My Battle) in France.

Veterans Outing at Wildwood Saturday

Hundreds of Legionnaires are expected to attend a picnic of the Society of Forty and Eight at "The Dells," Wildwood, June 16. A program of athletic events and music will be given, the music being provided by the American Legion Band, the drum and bugle corps of 80 pieces of Voiture No. 5, and a glee club.

HEARST'S STAND WELCOMED BY TEACHERS

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 13.—High praise for the editorial stand taken by the Hearst publications in behalf of public education was voiced today by William R. Lasher, chairman of the Joint Committee of Teachers' Organizations, representing 77 teacher associations with 36,000 members.

Referring to an editorial in the New York American, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers under the caption, "This Nation Demands Fewer Politicians and More and Better Schools," Lasher said:

"It was a stirring appeal to the intelligence and patriotism of our people who, while inherently loyal to American ideals and institutions, are growing forgetful of the long established truth that free public education is the one important asset of our national life—the only stable foundation for hope and faith in our national future.

"Economy in governmental expenditures, against which our tax-burdened citizens are now justly complaining, is not only desirable but pressingly essential, but economy in the education of its children is, as has been wisely said, 'the most reckless extravagance the state can commit.'

"The committee, together with all the administrative employes of the Board of Education, extends its thanks to Mr. William Randolph Hearst for this splendid championship of free and full educational opportunity for the youth of our country, an opportunity now gravely menaced and curtailed in the interest of economy."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Tugwell Hearing First Attack On New Deal

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Tugwell case was only a public skirmish to screen a real political movement underneath.

It was started by several conservative Southern Democrats, who are dissatisfied at heart with the way the New Deal is going. They do not like the NRA, AAA, or even the PWA spending, although they cannot afford to say so publicly as yet. They did not like the gold policy, but they have had to keep more or less quiet about that also.

The nomination of Prof. Tugwell as undersecretary of agriculture gave them an opportunity to release some pentup feelings without exposing their position. They jumped at it.

HEARING

The Senate Agriculture Committee hearing showed how they felt. They knew they could not defeat Tugwell's promotion and they did not care to. They merely wanted to talk about their own attitudes and they did.

No one went so far as to break with the New Deal, but only so far as to express displeasure with radicalism.

(Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon.)

The whole show smacked of second-rate political vaudeville, involving stump speeches and sharp side remarks, much the same as in the Wirt hearing.

Tugwell handled himself rather modestly and quietly, as if he did not want to antagonize anyone. He was amply protected by the liberals on the committee, including Senators Norris, Wheeler and Bone. The professor seemed to have the advantage with the ladies in the audience because he was younger and more handsome than the Senators present.

Mrs. Tugwell was so bored she went home after the second hour. It was just that bad.

PORTENT

The serious portent of the thing was entirely lost on the participants and on the audience.

It is that there will be more Wirt hearings and more Tugwell hearings in one form or another as long as the New Deal continues to encounter the private disapproval of the more conservative element among its own supporters. Day by day, the opposition is getting bolder.

Dr. Wirt was not important. Prof. Tugwell is only a little more so. The underlying motives behind each case will undoubtedly continue to grow in importance as the newness of the New Deal wears off.

PINK

The Senate never was able to find out what Prof. Tugwell really was—a Socialist, a Democrat or a What-not.

If the Senators had called upon Tugwell's friends for the answer, they would have found that he is rated among his intimates as "a parlor pink." That is about the only phrase which accurately describes his political views.

It is a term coined many years ago by Red agitators to describe scornfully a diluted radical. It implies such things as white collar liberalism, a rejection of both Socialism and Communism, a passive agitator without political moorings.

It is also the consensus among Tugwell's associates that his pinkish hue has faded several shades since he has had the responsibilities of public office.

If you compare his 1931 speeches with his 1934 speeches, you will get the idea. He has whispered to several pals that those old addresses have come back to haunt him like forgotten ghosts of the past. He would like to tear them up if he could. Not being able to do so, he must defend them as best he can.

Nothing will make a man grow away from radicalism faster than responsibility.

CAPITAL

The inside situation is working around now to the point where the investment bankers are going to promote the capital finance market.

They have been virtually on strike since the Securities Act was passed. That may have been because they were afraid of the Securities Act or because no big financing could be done.

Beginning June 16, investment bankers can no longer be private bankers. A number of houses (unlike Morgan's) have chosen to be investment bankers and nothing else. They can have no other source of revenue.

That means, if they are to live, they will have to get busy and stir up some capital financing. They will.

NOTES

Prof. Tugwell had a neat way of escaping verbal punishment in the Senate hearings. When he got into a corner, he started talking academically over the heads of his hearers . . . When Senator Long walked in, a committee member whispered:

"Here comes the Durante of the Senate."

Another committee member said privately to a colleague:

"What I don't like about college professors is that they think they are the only ones in the world who are honest and intelligent."

His colleague replied that when the administration really wanted impartial administrators it went after college professors or army officers . . . The conclusion of impartial committee members upon reading the Tugwell speeches was that he does not make a very thrilling speech . . .

LEASE FOR EXPO APPROVED

A lease for the Greater Pittsburgh Exposition Society on the Exposition property at the Point has been approved in finance committee of City Council.

The proposition will come up for a final vote in Council Monday.

The society plans to raise funds through the leasing of exhibit space to construct a $5,000,000 exposition building and convention hall.

Sponsors of the project have indicated that federal aid will be sought.

The proposed building has been opposed by the City Planning Commission as a hindrance to new traffic arteries planned at the Point.

The lease, which has twice been refused an affirmative recommendation in Council, was called up yesterday by Councilman John M. Huston and amended to provide that the society must raise sufficient funds to construct and equip the building by October 1, 1935, or forfeit the lease.

Four Seek Divorce, One Decree Granted

Divorce suits have been filed by M. Bruce Curry against Nellie Curry, Sue M. Yurack against George Yurack, Ida Silver against Dave Silver and by Ruth J. McCleary against Robert W. McCleary. A divorce was granted to Emily Guidotti from Foster Guidotti.

Beechview Still Operator Sought

The owner of a new 50-gallon still seized yesterday in a house in Belasco avenue, Beechview, was sought by police today. No one was in the place when a police squad entered, confiscated the still and destroyed 24 barrels of mash.

U. S. BANS SPAN AT DRAVOSBURG

The Dravosburg Bridge project is definitely out as part of the Allegheny County Authority, according to Commissioner C. M. Barr.

Barr said yesterday he had received advice from Washington that the government had ruled against the bridge which was to have cost $1,655,000 from an appropriation of $30,000,000 sought for self-liquidating projects here.

Complication of toll arrangements in connection with the McKeesport Bridge was understood to be one of the objections to the Dravosburg span.

The Commissioners provisionally agreed to pay half of $1,200 for trucks needed for a Relief Works Division project at Dravosburg on Wilson road from Maple avenue to Washington avenue.

DOUBLE CRASH INJURES SIX

Six persons, including three women, were injured early today in a head-on collision involving two automobiles and a trolley at Fifth avenue and Boquet street.

The injured were passengers in an auto driven, police said, by John Daugherty, 38, of 1916 Wayne street, Swissvale.

They were Daugherty, his sister, Elizabeth, 22; Christina Devlin, 32, 1915 Wayne street; Grace Kennedy, 48, 801 Morewood avenue; Godfrey Jones, 35, 7517 Melrose street, and K. Okazaki, 38, of 234 Oakland avenue. Miss Daugherty and Miss Devlin were detained at Montefiore Hospital, the latter with a broken leg. The other four were discharged after treatment.

Elmer O. Johnson, 28, of 7425 Duquesne avenue, Swissvale, driver of the other car, and two passengers were uninjured, police said.

Daugherty was turning left at Boquet street when his auto and the street car collided, police reported. The impact threw his car against Johnson's machine. Occupants of the two autos were in the same party.

POKER PLAYERS TOO ROUGH

A fight over a poker game in which a deputy constable participated was aired in North Side Police Court today.

Amos Coffer, 25, of 1430 Lorain street, testified he had been pursued from a Charles street cafe yesterday, beaten at Irwin and North avenues by Louis Eisenbeis, 44, of 426 Ruxton street, a deputy constable from the office of Alderman A. M. Maloney, and Albert A. Schaffer, 46, of 432 Michigan street.

Schaffer wielded a black jack belonging to Eisenbeis, Coffer related, inflicting severe head injuries which were dressed at Allegheny General Hospital.

Eisenbeis and Schaffer testified Coffer had grabbed money and fled. Coffer denied this, saying Shaffer took the money. All were discharged by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt when Attorney Jacob Frank, for Coffer, said he would prefer charges of aggravated assault and battery against the other two.

Man, Girl Saved From Drowning

MONONGAHELA, Pa., June 13.—(AP.)—A man and a girl were saved from drowning in the Monongahela River yesterday. Elmer Weber, 20, was brought ashore by Roy Hoon, 19, and Emory Czzatch, 18.

Marie Swithoat, 14, plunged out of sight in a deep pool while wading and was saved by John Hoffman, 16, and Conrad Shipe, 15, students at the Monongahela High School.

Speaker

FATHER JOHN R. HAGAN

SACRED HEART GRADUATING 29

Twenty-nine girl graduates of Sacred Heart High School will receive diplomas at commencement exercises Sunday at 11 a. m. in Sacred Heart Church, Shady avenue and Walnut street.

The Rev. John R. Hagan, superintendent of Cleveland parish schools and director of the Sisters College, Cleveland, will deliver the address. The Rev. Thomas F. Conkley, pastor of Sacret Heart, will celebrate graduation mass, assisted by the Rev. Howard J. Carroll as deacon, the Rev. Victor I. Kennedy as sub-deacon, and the Rev. E. PLANE VICTIM'S BODY TO RETURN

BUENOS AIRES, June 13.—(AP.)—The body of H. Greig Veeder, American engineer who was one of five killed in a crash of a Pan-American Grace Airways plane near Junin Monday, was brought here today.

The body will be started on its way to Pittsburgh, where Veeder lived, on Saturday.

The bodies of Charles F. Lindenberg, pilot, and James Raley, radio operator, have not been recovered from the shallow lake into which the plane plunged.

Samuel B. Eisenmann, co-pilot and a Chilean woman, also were killed in the crash.

Don't dread the morning to come!

Take a Bromo-Seltzer the first thing on arising to avoid that "morning after" feeling. Effervescing Bromo-Seltzer has been a standby for over forty years.

No wonder! Here's what it does. First... relieves gas on the stomach. Then, relieves headaches. You are soothed, too. Your alkaline reserve is strengthened. You feel refreshed, clear-headed, ready for a day's work. A balanced compound of five medicinal ingredients. Works faster because you take it as a liquid. No mere pain-killer is as effective.

Keep a bottle handy. Or ask for it at soda-fountains. The one and only "Emerson's" Bromo-Seltzer. Dependable, contains no narcotics.

The Quest for Quiet leads to New York's DEVON

In a bustling, fascinating city where it becomes increasingly difficult to find home quiet together with town living, New York's DEVON is a real treasure. For its peaceful charm in the midst of fashionable activity. For its standards of spaciousness and comfort... and for its famous Warwick cuisine and management.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Tiny Wonders If Gradual Love Is Real Thing

Does love hit one with a CRASH and a BANG?

Is it something that takes one completely off the feet . . . and immediately causes the whole world to change color?

Or is it a slow process, developing, often, from indifference, and even at times evolving itself from a dislike?

These things are weighing down the mind of TINY . . .

For this thing called love has been a slow process for her, and she wonders if it is the real thing.

Dear Miss Brunot:

Here is my question. Does love come with a loud noise, crashing and banging in upon one? Or is it likely to be different? Last year I started going with a fellow whom I knew to see, but had very seldom spoken to him.

Miss Brunot

At first I did not like him so very well and just went with him to please my girl friend, who went with his brother. Lately he has been treating me rather coolly, and now at the thought of losing him, I believe I really love him. I have cried myself to sleep night after night, and even dream of him. And wake up crying.

My girl friend says it is because I have just gotten used to him. That I don't love him. Or I would have gone crazy over him from the first. She says true love comes with the first hello.

I have tried going out with other fellows, but I am always thinking of him. Do you think I hold a true love for him? His family treats me very well and have invited me to spend a week at their place. Do you think I should visit his people if he has broken away from me? I remain, TINY.

I do not think it would be wise to visit this boy's people, Tiny, if you and he are at odds . . . Maybe he got weary waiting for you to indicate some liking of him . . . There are many kinds of love, and there are many paths leading up to it.

There is the quick love that takes one by storm. This often does not last as long as it might . . . For like a heavy tornado it strikes, and goes. Then, sometimes, love comes gradually, and lasts for all times . . .

It appears that you are in love, and maybe you are taking the young fellow's indifference too seriously. Can't your girl's friend do something toward bringing his brother back to you?

ASKS FOR HELP

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have liked a certain young man for over a year. I feel sure he also likes me, at least he did until he began running around with a bunch of fellows who are sort of wild. He had been nice and quiet, and we had good times together, and he seemed as if he wanted to be with me.

Lately he hasn't been going with these fellows so much. And he has a job now. I fear the feeling I have for him is turning into something deeper than friendship, and I am afraid I will never win him. And so am asking you to help me get him. For life without him wouldn't be worth living. * ANXIOUS.

You speak too strongly when you say life without this fellow would not be worth living . . . You are not old enough, nor experienced enough to let any one person completely spoil the long years that may be stretching ahead for you.

Since your boy friend has given up these rather wild companions and has settled down to a job, it looks as if he was facing things seriously. And it may be on account of you . . . So, cheer up, and put forth your best foot, and I am almost sure you will win him.

ONLY HALF LOVE

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am almost 16 years of age, and have been going with a boy of 19 almost a year. But he has been going with another girl for almost three years. He says he doesn't know what to do. Because he cares for both of us. But if I go out with another boy, he always starts an argument. But he still comes up to see me.

If he sees me dressed up, he makes the statement that he knows I am dated with another fellow. I argue him out of it, but it is difficult.

I love him. E. S.

Here's a fellow who is very selfish. He purposes to eat his cake, and have it. He wants to go with two girls because he likes them both. And yet he doesn't want them to divide attentions with other boys. I cannot help but draw the conclusion that what he says to you, he also says to the other girl.

It does give me an idea, all this, E. S., that the best thing for you to do is find another boy friend, one who will not share himself so generously with another girl . . . You are too fine a girl to waste your whole affections upon but half love . . . It's like getting a half loaf of bread, when you really want a whole one.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

WORLD KNOWLEDGE BY WIVES MAKE HOMES HAPPY, SAYS FAY KING

By FAY KING.

Wives should be as neat and pleasant in their homes as they would need to be in business offices.

Husbands should be as agreeable and courteous to their wives and families as they must be to their business associates.

The home is more important than the office.

Domestic lives need not be narrow to wives who will trouble to read their newspapers. Not just news that entertains them, but news that will interest their husbands.

Men love to talk about politics, sports and world affairs. Wives who have read enough of these to listen understandingly will make their husbands happier to be at home.

The more interested wives are in general topics the less time they waste in nagging or harping on trifles that bore both.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Inexpert Defense

When a contract can be defeated three tricks and the defense is so inexpert that the Declarer fulfills his doubled contract and scores a game and rubber, one might be pardoned for quarreling with the designation "expert" as applied to the defending partnership. However, experts are that way because of the vast number of great achievements to their credit and not because they, like more ordinary mortals, never make mistakes.

The hand below was played in a Rubber game in the Experts' Room at Crockford's Club, New York. East and West had names which are known to most Contract players throughout the United States.

West, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A 9 7 3 ♡ 9 6 ◇ K 10 ♣ Q 9 7 6 3
♠ Q 10 ♡ A 8 7 5 4 2 ◇ Q 8 6 4 ♣ A	North West East South	♠ 2 ♡ K J 10 ◇ A J 9 7 5 2 ♣ 10 8 5
	♠ K J 8 6 5 4 ♡ Q 3 ◇ 3 ♣ K J 4 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	2 ♠ (1)
3 ◇	3 ♠	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	4 ♠ (2)	Pass	Pass
Double (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A rather risky Overcall at the range of two. South's justification is his fine distribution and the length, if not strength, of the trump suit.

2—North's decision to play defensively at a game contract is quite sound. It appears to him that an adverse game in hearts is certain, whereas the penalty played at spades should not be severe.

3—West has a reasonably close decision whether to double or to continue. It will be observed that by taking a finesse against the diamond King either six hearts or six diamonds may be made, but West did not feel certain that they could make even five and decided that by opening his singleton Ace of clubs and thereby getting a ruff, he would defeat the opposing contract at least two tricks. Hence he decided to prefer the safety of a 500 set rather than the uncertainty of attempting to win the rubber.

In accordance with his plan, West opened the Ace of clubs, and after the Dummy went down, decided to shift to diamonds. He chose as his card to lead the Queen, feeling that his partner could not be misled as to the number of cards he held in the suit since he had supported East's diamond bid. South made a very fine play by not covering in Dummy with the King, although this should not have fooled the East and West players had they been at their best. The East player not only failed to overtake the Queen with the Ace in order to give his partner an immediate ruff in clubs, but played the diamond 7. West, reading this as a command to continue the suit, led another diamond, which South ruffed. South then proceeded to draw the trumps and discarded one of his losing hearts on the fifth club in Dummy. Thus he fulfilled his game contract.

Perfect defense would have resulted in a 900-point penalty rather than in a fulfilled doubled contract. All that was necessary after the lead of the club Ace was for East to secure the lead twice, once with the Ace of diamonds and once with the heart King, in order that West might utilize both his trumps in ruffing clubs.

Tomorrow's Hand

North, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A 10 7 ♡ A Q 7 6 2 ◇ A 4 ♣ K J 9
♠ 9 6 5 3 2 ♡ K 9 5 4 3 ◇ 8 3 ♣ 8	North West East South	♠ K 8 4 ♡ J 10 8 ◇ K Q 7 ♣ Q 7 6 3
	♠ Q J ♡ — ◇ J 10 9 6 5 2 ♣ A 10 5 4 2

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

Hints for the Household :-: :-:

Varnished walls should be washed with warm water containing a little paraffin.

A sprinkling of flour on a damp cloth will remove dirt from tiles or white enamel.

When using treacle for cooking purposes, dip the spoon into boiling water before putting it into the treacle tin. The treacle will slip off the hot spoon instead of dripping off in the usual slow manner.

The centers of towels usually wear thin first. Cut a hole from the worn center just large enough for the head to pass through, bind the edges with tape, and use on the shoulders when washing the hair.

Mildew stains may be removed with a paste made by mixing together two teaspoons of water, one of powdered chalk, and two of soap powder. The spots should afterwards be well rinsed and dried in the sunlight.

Avis Seen as Shielding Sam

I was so astonished at Lillian's viciously uttered speech that for a second I could only gasp at her. She caught my eye and grinned, her spleen dissolving, as it generally does once her temper has exploded.

"I know," she said. "It isn't on the cards to call a sweet young thing an anointed little liar. And at that, the epithet doesn't exactly fit her. She can't by any stretch of the imagination be called 'little.'"

The grin which accompanied her words was infectious, and I found myself smiling broadly back at her. Hugh's lips twitched, but I had the uneasy impression that he did not wish to betray any amusement, and I wondered again if Lillian's patent dislike of Avis was arousing his championship of her.

"You evidently do not believe her story," he said quietly.

Lillian shot a keen, searching glance at him.

"Do you?" she asked.

He hesitated.

"It sounded plausible," he said at last.

Lillian's lips curled ever so slightly.

ARTIST IN HER LINE

"Yes, she's quite an artist in her line," she said. And there was an obduracy in her voice that betrayed her unwillingness to yield any part of the opinion she had formed.

I saw Hugh's lips close with the obstinacy of a man prejudiced by another's too palpable bias, and I spoke quickly.

"Do you mean, Lillian, that you think all of her story was a product of her imagination?"

"No. I don't go that far," Lillian retorted, "for the simple reason that I don't think she's clever enough to invent a fantastic yarn like that out of the whole cloth. No doubt she saw a man come up to the window and listen, but she didn't hear or see him come up a ladder. She saw Sam Brixton coming out of that window. That's what she saw."

"But," Hugh's voice was puzzled, "what reason would she have for concealing the fact that it was Brixton she saw? He is the merest acquaintance of hers. There is no reason at all for her to shield him."

"You are right. She had no reason. But, mark my word, she shielded him, just the same."

Her obstinate voice reminded me irresistibly of the old proverb, "a woman convinced against her will is of the same opinion still."

"I can think of a dozen different motives which might actuate that lady," she went on. "Sam may have had a chance to promise her a reward for keeping quiet. And she's a greedy thing, with not a shred of scruple about her. Even if he didn't see her, she might be delicately toying with the notion of possible polite blackmail later on, or—she may simply be indulging her dislike of you, Madge, by keeping quiet upon something it is important for you to know."

Hugh turned startled eyes first upon me and then upon Lillian.

HUGH ALARMED

"Do you mean," he said slowly, "that Miss Avis dislikes Madge, and would try to injure her?"

Lillian gave a scornful little laugh.

"Does she dislike Madge?" she repeated. "My boy, 'dislike is a feeble word,' if you remember your old temperance poems. The young woman has been brought up discreetly, and she has a very lively regard for the probable consequences of slipping arsenic in the coffee of your hostess. Otherwise, we'd be ordering floral harps and gates ajar for our Madgie about now, instead of chinning over the possible trick the fair Avis has played us about Sam Brixton."

"But—but—this is terrible," Hugh said, his horrified eyes fixed upon my face. "It doesn't seem possible. But if Lillian is not mistaken, and I've never known her to be, why are you keeping that girl in the house a minute longer? Look here! If you want me to, I'll get my car and take her and her mother back to the city a ssoon as they can get ready to go."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Certain dyes do not interfere with a permanent. Pure Egyptian henna does nothing to prevent the hardboiled wave from being a success. If diluted peroxide has been used and the applications have not been many, the little heaters will do no damage to hair shafts. The cautious operator makes a test curl. But if you have been using any coloring agent, make a confession when you make your appointment.

When eyes are set close together, the side parting of the hair is more friendly than the middle line. Eyebrows should be extended at the far ends by the subtle use of the crayon that matches exactly the color of the eye lamberquins.

Another trick is to use rouge on the eyelids, sweeping it out over the temples and cheek bones. Keep the hair off the forehead if possible. Have plenty of white space between the eyebrows. Here's one type who is entitled to do plenty of tweezing and teasing.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Neglect of Sprained Ankle

Recently I visited a friend who was convalescing from a sprained ankle. He is an energetic man engaged in the practice of law. You can appreciate his annoyance at having to remain away from his office.

Dr. Copeland

Upon questioning him he told me he had slipped on a step and turned his ankle. A week passed before he consulted a physician. He ignored the pain, thinking it was merely a slight wrench, not requiring medical attention. My friend would probably have saved many days of discomfort and suffering, as well as time away from his office, if he had immediately consulted with his doctor.

Sprained ankle is a common accident, but one which is too frequently neglected. Some persons are more liable to have sprained ankle than are others. It is probable they have anatomical weaknesses of the muscles, joints and ligaments. Such a weakness increases the danger of strain.

In many instances the accident can be traced to improper footwear. For example, sprained ankle is a frequent complaint of women who wear high heels with little or no support to the ankle. Many cases result from carelessness in walking. For this reason it is wise to heed the slogan, "Watch your step."

If you injure your ankle or other joint of the body and suffer pain, I advise that you consult with a physician. A common mistake is to decide for yourself you have a wrench or sprain, when really there is a serious injury to a joint. It may be a broken bone, or a dislocation of the joint.

The physician can detect the true condition for he is trained to do so. When in doubt, he will resort to the use of the X-ray. This picture will show clearly whether the bone has been injured, or the joint put out of place. By this procedure unnecessary pain, discomfort and loss of time from work will be prevented.

A simple sprain can often be remedied by the application of adhesive plaster around the ankle. In applying the adhesive plaster make sure you do not constrict the soft tissues and choke the circulation. If you are not experienced in applying the treatment, it should be done by more efficient hands.

In the more severe form of sprain, where swelling is marked it is a good plan to apply cold compresses. This treatment will relieve the pain and reduce the swelling. No bandage or adhesive support should be applied while there is undue swelling of the ankle.

I am confident that sprains and broken ankles would occur less frequently if care were taken in the choice of proper shoes, and good posture were practiced in walking. Avoid running and careless stepping when on rough roads, hills or going up or down steps. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Answers to Health Queries

Sion. Q.—My father has been very ill with gall bladder trouble. What foods should he avoid in order to overcome the trouble? Are there any further precautions under the circumstances?

A.—All rich, greasy foods, excessive sugars, etc. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A Reader. Q.—After a radical breast operation which would be more effective, radium or the X-rays? Are both employed in some instances?

A.—This depends upon the exact nature of the trouble. As a rule deep X-ray therapy is advised. Your doctor would be the best judge in this case.

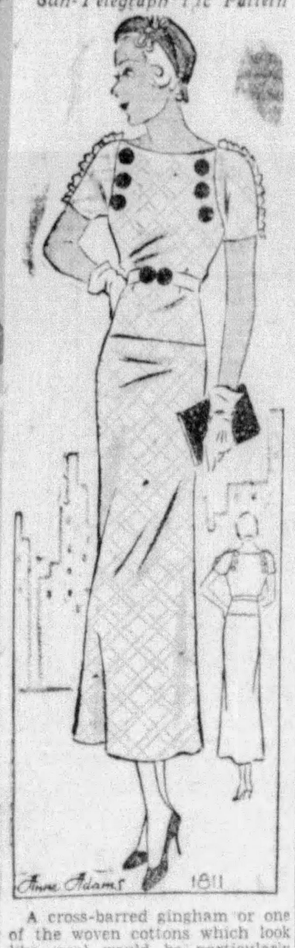
A Particularly Chic Frock and Easy to Make

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern



A cross-barred gingham or one of the woven cottons which look like wool would be particularly nice in this model. But accurately speaking, it is a particularly nice model which will look well in any attractive cotton or silk. As you see—it is simplicity itself to make—which is why it is such a "find." If you want to obtain the greatest possible returns in chic for a few hours spent in dressmaking, this pattern is the plan to follow. Should you not care for the little frills on the sleeves—just leave them off—the dress is good looking without them.

Pattern 1811 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅛ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS

CROSS STITCH PICTURE — PATTERN 763

An embroidered picture is always fun to do and when it is in cross-stitch it is doubly so. Easy to do, the trees and flowers grow quickly in their gay colors. The crosses are the popular six to the inch. The parts of the picture that are white in the illustration may be left without embroidery or filled out with cross-stitch if preferred. The design, which measures 11x13½ inches, also is most effective for use on a pillow; it is easy to carry out in color, for these are indicated by markings on the design, making it unnecessary to follow a color chart.

Pattern 763 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a picture; a color key; directions and material requirements for making a picture and pillow.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Searching for a dime is out of the question with a new handbag. It has an ornament of cloisonne or gilt, a disc which when turned around shows an opening where coins are kept. Space for two quarters, nickels and dimes.

Maybe the exchequer will permit an ermine cape with your new evening frock. A new model is tightly drawn across the shoulder line and gathered in the back at the waistline. Nice with a plain black velvet wrap when winter comes again.

Guests of Guests

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

My mother and father received an invitation to a reception. This invitation also included me. However, I have been going with a young lady for a year or so, but the person who is having the party is unaware of this, as I have not see them for some time. Would I be justified in taking my friend to this reception without further procedure, or should I write and ask for the privilege of bringing her? BEN.

The thing to do . . . and it is very often done . . . is to write to the hostess and ask her permission to bring your friend to the party. I am sure that she will be delighted to send her an invitation.

Order in Serving Guests

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Where there is no maid and the hostess does the serving herself, is it the host who is served first, or the woman guest? Or shall I say the woman guest of honor, then the other women and then the men?

Please let me know because once and for all I'd like to get this little argument settled with my husband. We always seem to discuss this little matter. B.

When either the hostess or the host does the serving at the table, it is the woman guest of honor who is served first, the woman seated on the right of the host. Next the woman on the left of the host is served, and then the other women guests, and last of the women, the hostess. Next, the man guest of honor, on the right of the hostess, then the man on the left of the hostess, and then the other men, the host last.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

The National Park Alumnae are planning a dinner-dance just for themselves. This party will not be a benefit at all, a member assures me, but will be all fun for the alumnae, who have sponsored many a successful benefit.

This dinner-dance for members and their escorts will be an event of Saturday night at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

* * *

Junior Leaguers had a meeting yesterday in the Edgeworth Club not in the club rooms as usual, at which the new officers presided.

Another group of the smart set, headed by President Mrs. George H. Love, visited yesterday the Pleasant Hills Farm Association summer camp on the Flaugherty Run road, designed to supply a vacation spot for girls.

Hospital Benefit Today At Country Club

Garden-surrounded Longue Vue Country Club is becoming the ideal place for benefit bridge-luncheons. Already this season, there've been several there, and today brings another—the social service committee of the Presbyterian Hospital is giving the one today, for the hospital, of course.

And chairmen for today are Mrs. Kirkland Wiley Todd and Mrs. Ernest N. Calhoun. And they have arranged a fashion show as well as bridge for entertainment of guests.

Edgewood Cot Club Takes 20 Tables

The Edgewood Cot Club alone has taken 20 tables for today, and individual table-holders are legion. Among them are Mrs. Andrew W. Herron, Mrs. Edward Goehring, Mrs. Patrick Thomson, Miss Velma Wilson, Mrs. A. W. Robertson, Mrs. William R. Hadley and Mrs. Brice Lemmon.

Others are Mrs. E. L. Benedict, Mrs. H. Lee Briney, Mrs. Edward Ludwig, Mrs. Fred W. Miner, Mrs. W. Kenneth McKnight, Mrs. Malcolm Carrington, Mrs. George Stewart, Mrs. F. K. Matheny and Mrs. Milton Phillips.

Mrs. E. M. Love will be there; Mrs. William Keller, Mrs. W. Eugene Gary, Mrs. J. K. B. Hare, Mrs. Howard Talbot, Mrs. Howard B. Smith, Mrs. C. Hax McCullough, Mrs. Charles Gracey, Mrs. C. K. Robinson, Mrs. Samuel E. Hackett, Mrs. H. Fred Mercer, Mrs. David R. Demaree and many more.

Attention Is Turned To Children's Show

Now that the big horse show, the Allegheny Country Club event is over for another year, lovers of horse shows are anticipating the children's show, to be staged Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock on the John W. Lawrences' estate by the only children's hunt roundabout—the Hart's Run Junior Hunt.

The children's show always attracts a large crowd—both because of the attraction of the children themselves and because of their excellent horsemanship.

Fonce Santalucia Becomes Bride

Miss Fonce Santalucia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Santalucia, of Sharpsburg, and Leo A. Haberman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haberman, of Sharpsburg, were married yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock in St. Mary's Church, Sharpsburg.

Mrs. Joseph Haberman was matron of honor; Miss Carmella Santalucia, maid of honor; Miss Lillian Wernert, Miss Teresa Defazio, Miss Madelaine Moscarelli, Miss Antoinette Boscadine, Miss Josephine Crisasio, Miss Regina Daly, Miss Alma Herman and Miss Edith Sanguigni were bridesmaids.

Jack Santalucia was best man, and Regis Kruth, Gerald D'Ambrosia, Michael Paones, Joseph Madia, Frank Crisasio, Anthony Riley, Stuart Hagerty and Henry Fredericks were ushers.

A dinner and reception in the Knights of Columbus Hall, Sharpsburg, followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Haberman will be at home in Sharpsburg after an eastern motor trip.

Kilroy Wedding Hour Is Changed

The hour of the wedding of Miss Margaret M. Kilroy, niece of Thomas Burke, of Lloyd avenue, Swissvale, to Francis X. Gorham, son of Mrs. Mary A. Gorham, has been changed from 9 o'clock to 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The ceremony will take place in St. Anselm's Church, Swissvale.

Sorority Group To Entertain

There will be fortune telling and a cake sale, and tea will be served during the afternoon.

Benefit Fair For Clinic Planned

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Another benefit has been planned for the Samuel Langley Eye Clinic. It's to be a street fair this time with a block on both streets where Sherwood and Landis join being reserved for the fair from 5 until 11 o'clock, on Tuesday, June 26. The 12 organizations which maintain the clinic are sponsoring the benefit. The Junior Woman's Club of Sherade will have charge of the street dancing, which is to be one of the principal features of entertainment.

The senior Woman's Club will supervise the fish pond and balloons, a feature which will probably be of greatest interest to the younger fair visitors.

The clinic's work is progressing. 282 children having been fitted with glasses since September and 403 since the clinic was established in January of last year. In addition to this number, many children have been given examinations and treatments.

D.A.R. Will Mark Flag Day

In celebration of Flag Day, a flag demonstration and card party will be held tomorrow by the General John Neville Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution at Mrs. William Metcalfe's home, Grove street, Sewickley. The members are inviting guests to the affair.

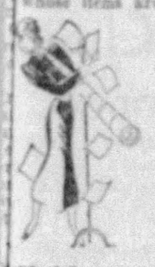
THROUGH THE SPYGLASS

-:- Viewing the New -:-



You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6100 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

This is about a "pint" . . . but for the glorification of the outer man (or woman) instead of the inner! A whole pint of eau de cologne for 85c . . . complete with a thingumabob that sticks down inside and allows you to spray nice quantities at yourself . . . the family pooch . . . or someone's else! Really a bargain at such a price . . . and super-super in the way of a hot-weather pickmeup (externally, we again repeat!)

* * *

Blouses follow the leader and pop forth at $1.09. Which is quite a decent sum for good blouses like these. Of matelasse organdie—some in great huge block plaids of deep blue, navy and white . . . or black, grey and white! Some with bows . . . some with glass-buttons . . . some with jabots! Very good for only 9 cents over a dollar.

* * *

Then we just up and dug out the buyer of this one particular department and put her on the spot . . .

"Are you going to have any more of those white pique coats that practically 'walked out' the other day the sale opened?"

"Oh yes . . I've ordered 500 more" And so there you are . . . we have the lowdown on white pique coats for you. Swagger models with huge navy taffeta bows at the chinline . . . loose, comfortable darlings that pack nicely . . . wear well . . . wash like angels . . . and look too sweet for words (even ours!) Incidentally . . . biggest and best for last . . . they're only $1.98. Gasp!

* * *

"Meet me at the Fair" . . . (sez you) And women will hasten to town for that travel frock which is to take them through days and nights of travel . . . to lunch . . . through the Fair shopping . . . and everything else under the sun!

We know where you'll find them! These often-hard-to-discover styles that fill so many "bills!" One of the stores has a wide assortment of them in cool sheers, whose styling and dark color belie their comfortable summery qualities!

In beetroot brown, navy, and black and white stripings (indistinct) . . . frocks with little jackets over them. Trimmings are crisp numbers like waffle pique and organdie! And they're priced moderately for such all-'round styles to wear well into the fall. $17.50 in women's sizes.

* * *

Those "wagon wheels" that have been turning of late, are made by the rubber-tired ones on these beverage wagons that more and more hostesses are using on their lawns . . . the terrace . . . the porch . . . or inside the house.

Ivory legs (fold-up-able!) with two trays to set onto them—green—the top one with scooped out holes for the glasses and a spacious place for hors d'oeuvres! Nice to get now and keep right through into the winter . . . as a fireside supper or sumpin'! $5.95.

* * *

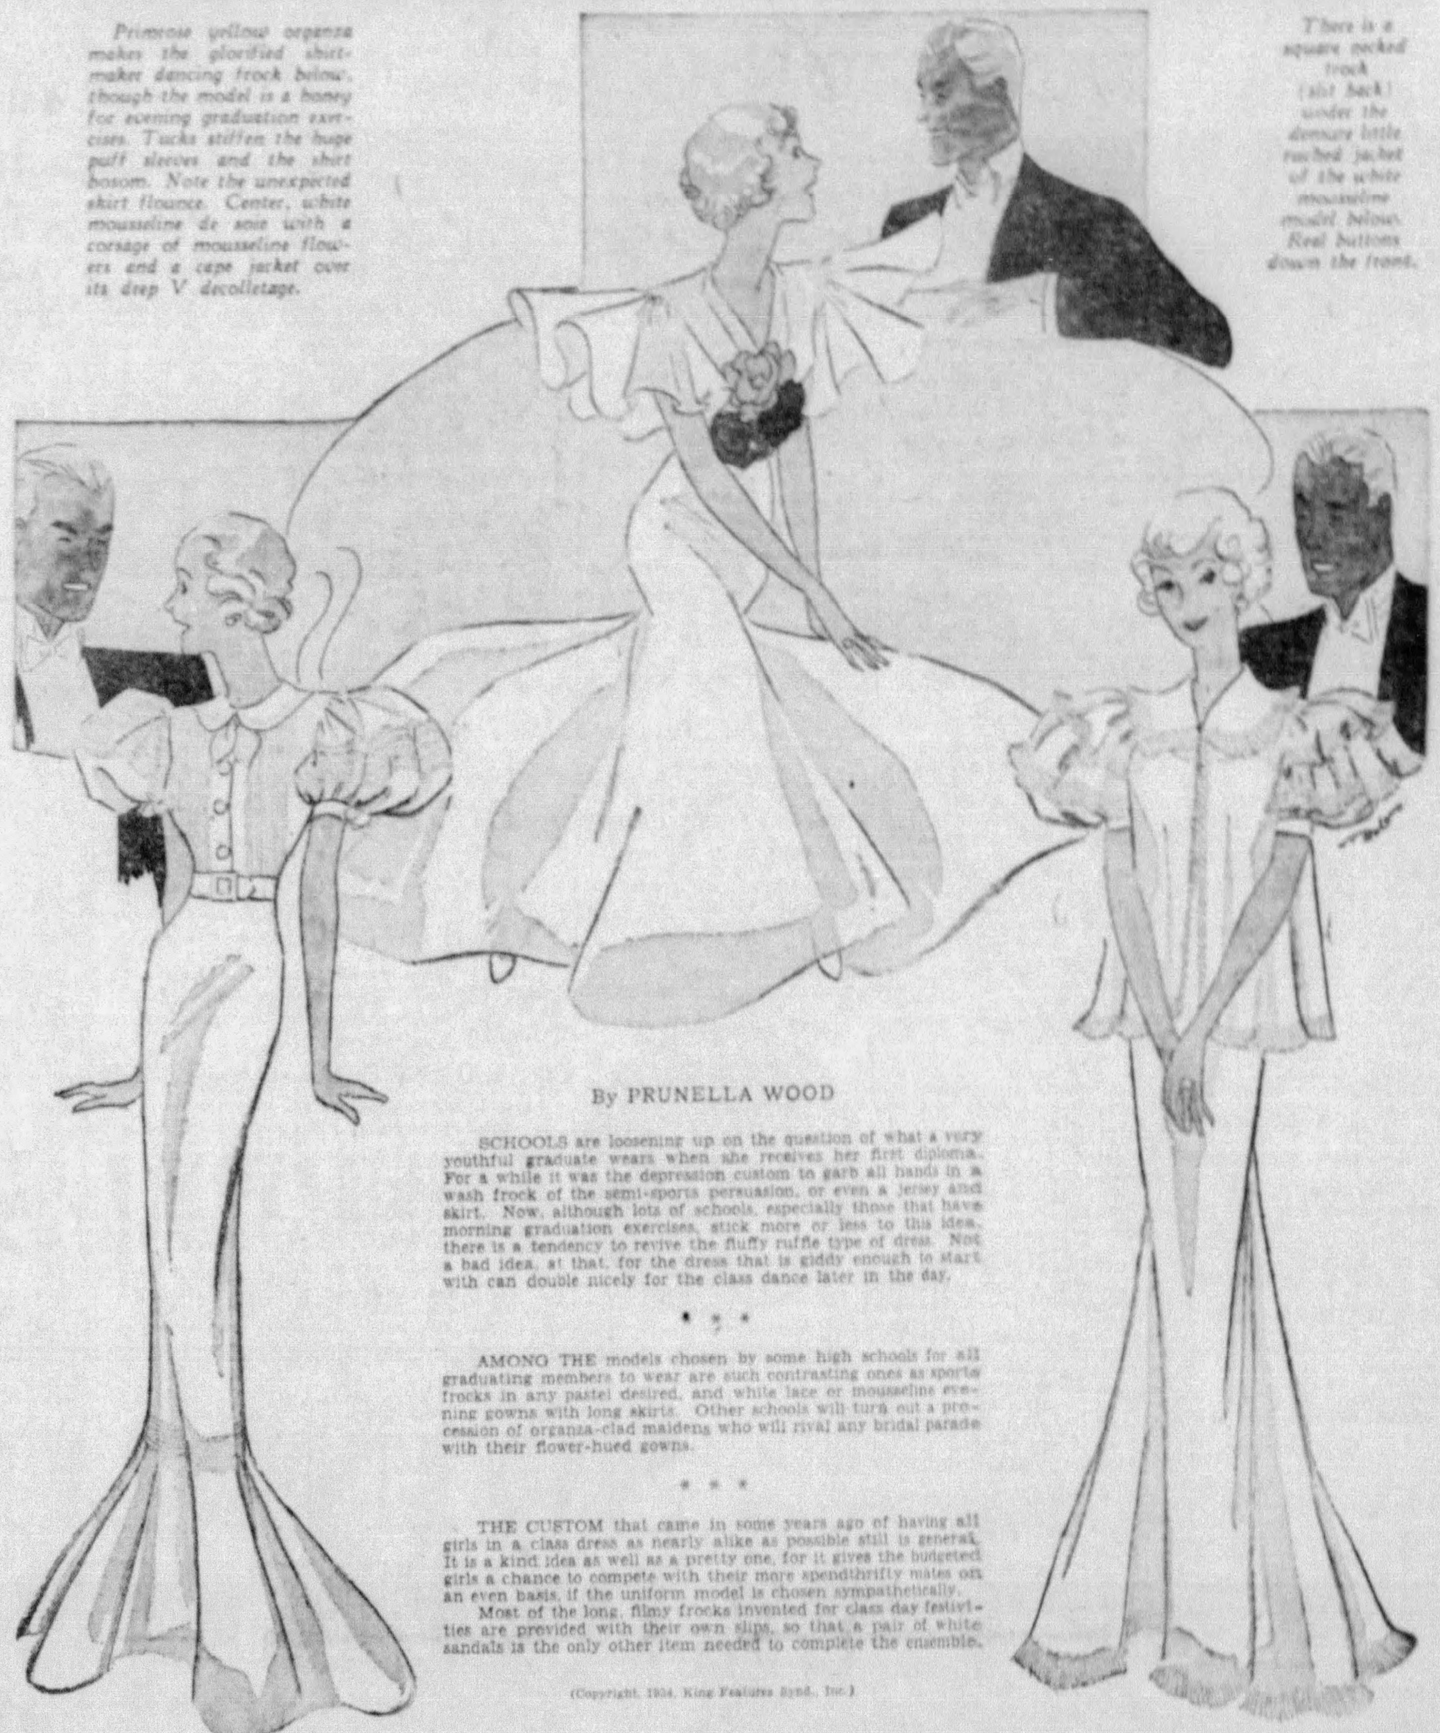
Aha . . . we cry in accents wild! We've brung home the bacon! This being nothing less than the new sea grass porch rugs that are appearing at the sum of $7.95 this year (whereas, last year's price was some higher!) . . . and also being as how they're awfully much cheaper than even those that don't wear nearly as well . . . or look nearly as nice! Size 6x9 . . . in two patterns—diamond shapes or plain borders . . . green or orange colorings that are NOT stenciled . . . but woven clear through! Good foundations for porch fun this summer!

—DOROTHY RANDALL.

FILMY FROCKS FOR GRADUATION DOINGS

Primrose yellow organza makes the glorified shirt-maker dancing frock below, though the model is a honey for evening graduation exercises. Tucks stiffen the huge puff sleeves and the shirt bosom. Note the unexpected shirt flounce. Center, white mousseline de soie with a corsage of mousseline flowers and a cape jacket over its deep V decolletage.

There is a square necked frock (slit back) under the demure little ruched jacket of the white mousseline model below. Real buttons down the front.



By PRUNELLA WOOD

SCHOOLS are loosening up on the question of what a very youthful graduate wears when she receives her first diploma. For a while it was the depression custom to garb all hands in a wash frock of the semi-sports persuasion, or even a jersey and skirt. Now, although lots of schools, especially those that have morning graduation exercises, stick more or less to this idea, there is a tendency to revive the fluffy ruffle type of dress. Not a bad idea, at that, for the dress that is giddy enough to start with can double nicely for the class dance later in the day.

* * *

AMONG THE models chosen by some high schools for all graduating members to wear are such contrasting ones as sports frocks in any pastel desired, and white lace or mousseline evening gowns with long skirts. Other schools will turn out a procession of organza-clad maidens who will rival any bridal parade with their flower-hued gowns.

* * *

THE CUSTOM that came in some years ago of having all girls in a class dress as nearly alike as possible still is general. It is a kind idea as well as a pretty one, for it gives the budgeted girls a chance to compete with their more spendthrifty mates on an even basis, if the uniform model is chosen sympathetically.

Most of the long, filmy frocks invented for class day festivities are provided with their own slips, so that a pair of white sandals is the only other item needed to complete the ensemble.

Graduating Class To Be Honored By P. T. A.

An entertainment will be held by the John Burrough P. T. A. tomorrow evening in honor of the graduating class. Speakers will be the Rev. G. B. Tejan, pastor of the Bellevue Avalon Lutheran Church; W. R. Steel, principal of the school; Mrs. Blanche C. Reed, parent education leader, and Miss Anna Ossenbeck, supervising teacher.

Music will be furnished by the Troy Hill Choral Club, and also by the graduating class, and dancing and singing under the direction of Miss Verna Ulrich will be included. Gifts will be presented by Mrs. Robert Hofmann, P. T. A. president, and officers will be installed.

Legion Auxiliary Has New Officers

Filling offices in the Allegheny County American Legion Auxiliary next year will be Mrs. Arthur Beaver, of Dravosburg, as president; Mrs. G. E. Hoesch and Mrs. G. M. Darby, first and second vice presidents; secretary, Mrs. Sylvester Smith; treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Hill; historian, Mrs. J. Hermann; chaplain, Mrs. F. G. Wazgoner; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. William McCurdy and Mrs. R. C. Malcolm.

* * *

Concluding its activities under Mrs. Allen McCully's presidency, the Town Club is having a trio of events beginning with a covered dish luncheon yesterday at Mrs. S. D. Myers' home, Kittanning road. Next Tuesday the annual luncheon will take place at the Wildwood Country Club and on the twenty-seventh a garden party will be held at Mrs. Thomas Harvey's home, Kittanning road.

Auxiliary Changes Garden Party Date

The annual garden party which the Woman's Auxiliary to the Salvation Army Home and Maternity Hospital was to have had tomorrow has been postponed until Wednesday, June 27. It will take place, as planned, at Mrs. William C. Ley's home, Virginia avenue, Ben Avon.

Aspinwall Women Will Have Party

The season's closing event for the Aspinwall Woman's Club will be a garden party at "Oakhurst," Mrs. Francis R. Harbison's home on Hunt road on June 21.

Scouts Will Get Course in Aquatics

The first Girl Scout School of Aquatics for waterfront counselors is being held at Pine Tree Camp, Long Pond, Plymouth, Mass., with Olive McCormick, national waterfront advisor of the Girl Scouts, in charge.

A complete course in waterfront activities will be given by Miss McCormick, including layout of the waterfront, equipment and supervision, instruction in boating and canoeing and practical work in swimming and life saving. Requirements for the course include the American Red Cross Life Savers' certificate.

A waterfront pageant for guests will be presented by Miss McCormick and the group members taking the course, on Sunday, June 24.

Dinner Planned To Precede Concert

Preceding the Hotel Schenley "pop concert," which the Tuesday Musical Club will sponsor on June 26, a group of members will have dinner on the terrace at 7 o'clock.

Esther Edmundson Mohr, a member of the club, is to be soloist that night. Mrs. David V. Murdoch, club president, will have as aides Mary Elizabeth Dickinson, Marian L. Murdoch, Selma Brandt and Ann Vernon Root.

Another of the club's "program material musicales" is scheduled for Tuesday at Mrs. M. W. St. John's home, Kittanning pike.

I'M THRILLED WITH THIS WASHDAY SECRET

Here is the Secret—

"It's thrilling to know what a world of difference this simple trick will make on washday," says a clever young housewife of New York.

"Here's what I do—

"I use my regular laundry soap and my regular washing method, then add 2 tablespoons or so of Lux. These richer suds speed up the washing — leave white clothes whiter, colors bright."

Women everywhere find this Lux trick a help on washday. Do try it yourself—it saves work, costs next to nothing!

NOTE: Use only Lux—no other soap—for silks, woolens, rayons. Delicate fabrics should never be exposed to harsh alkali or cake-soap rubbing.

Rushmore Selections Speeded

School and organization committees actively co-operating with the Pittsburgh Regional Rushmore Committee in the tri-state district must complete the selection of the best texts in their individual groups before Saturday.

Few of these participating units were yet to submit their winning texts received in the nation-wide Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition. The majority of committees rushed their task to completion without delay.

All committee selections must be received at the regional committee headquarters in the Sun-Telegraph main building before Saturday at noon. Once these late returns are registered and classified as to their division, the staff workers will have all entries ready for consideration of the regional committee.

The Pittsburgh committee must complete the naming of tri-state district winners before Saturday, June 23. These selections will be submitted to the national committee. President Roosevelt is chairman of that group. The selection of the inscription that will become the basis of the final inscription on the South Dakota national monument and the names of all winners are expected to be announced shortly after July 4.

The response of cities and hamlets throughout the country, according to national headquarters, exceeded returns ever received in any similar patriotic undertaking. Total entries entered over the country exceed one million, according to reports from Hearst newspapers which conducted the competition for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission.

'Trained Seals' Get New Time

Effective tonight, in order that members of the Pittsburgh and visiting teams may be brought to the microphone, Harry Keck and his Trained Seals will present their weekly sports broadcast at 6:45 instead of at 6 p. m., as heretofore.

At 5:15, Jerome Seder, nationally-known merchant, speaks from WCAE on the first anniversary of the NRA, to be observed Saturday.

Tom Morris, Jr., baritone, brings more airs of old Caledonia to the WCAE audience at 7:15.

Cook, Gob In Radio Clash

A harmonica will toot in the antarctic wastes of Little America tonight.

Another harmonica will toot in New York.

And the fight will be on—First Class Seaman William H. Hasley, Navy harmonica champion, versus Alphonse Carbone, ex-Marine and Byrd Expedition cook, with the dialing public and entire fleet of a nation occupying ringside seats.

The 10,000-mile mouth-organ tilt will be staged as a feature of Columbia's weekly two-way expedition broadcast, aired via WJAS from 10 to 10:30.

Alton A. Lindsey, biologist, of West Newton, Pa., a member of the Byrd staff, will speak briefly during the Polar pickup.

* * *

"The Fleet's In . . ." And so KDKA's weekly "Love Story" broadcast brings Edmund Lowe, of screen "tough guy" fame, to the microphone in the role of a handsome gob, who meets Mary Brian, a gal who doesn't like sailors. The play's entitled "Navy Born" and billed at 9:30 p. m.

* * *

Phil Spitalny's girl ensemble and Maxine, the maestro's newly-discovered songstress, do their weekly CBS broadcast from the WJAS studios tonight, chalking up the local station's eighth network broadcast within a month. The aggregation is filling a theater engagement here this week.

* * *

Howard Price, WCAE tenor, sings over NBC from WCAE tomorrow, being spotted at 1:45. The break, according to reports, may open the way to big time for the former coal fields boy. . . .

* * *

Songs by Reinald Werrenrath and Alice Mock, and reading of a message from President Roosevelt will mark a broadcast from the Radio Manufacturers Association convention at Chicago. . . . WCAE at 10:30. . . .

Oakland Patrol Presents Play

Members of the Oakland Junior Patrol Dramatic Club present a 15-minute play as a feature of the weekly Junior Patrol broadcast on WCAE at 4:45 today.

The play is entitled "Snow White and Rose Red," and will be given by the following children: Louise Carrozza, Celia Picci, Minnie Greenberg, Louis Lautman, Ethel Glensky and Ralph Etlestein.

'Goldbergs' Sponsor, Star Thrash Money Question; Show to Fade

BY AIRCASTER

The engaging episodes of "The Rise of the Goldbergs," will be paced from now on so as to lead to a climax on July 13, when, with "Amos 'n' Andy," who are sponsored by the same patron, they take leave of the air.

"Unlike "Amos 'n' Andy," "The Goldbergs" probably will not resume their adventures in September. Under normal conditions they would have been booked for the autumn, but all is not well with this presentation, which has been carrying a huge following for many months.

The sponsor and Gertrude Berg, creator and principal in "The Goldbergs," have come to a parting of the ways over the mere question of money. Mrs. Berg had entertained the cheerful notion that her outfit should be provided an increase in compensation. The sponsor has the notion that maybe with conditions so unsettled, giving "raises" is not yet in style.

In effect, Mrs. Berg said:

"The show won't go on without a raise."

With equal effect, the patron said:

"The show won't go on with a raise."

Sponsors usually have the last word, and that's the situation to date — unless some super diplomat comes into the scene, which isn't likely.

PLEASING RECIPES FOR HOT WEATHER

Try Pineapple Cake, Frozen Surprise Or Brambles

Won't you, Prudence Penny urges, carefully check over your recipes before sending them in to her? Almost daily she is forced to disqualify really fine recipes because the sender has failed, for instance, to state in the list of ingredients the amount of milk needed, yet in the method of preparation tells you "to add the milk."

You, probably, are so well acquainted with your recipe that you don't consciously realize other women will not instantly know what proportions to use. Consequently you omit an amount which makes your recipe of no value to another housewife.

Then, too, a few women are still forgetting to sign their names. If you'll only do as Prudence Penny does in publishing her recipes, you won't be so apt to forget to include your name. A form of this sort, on the top of every sheet (of course, you're only writing on one side of the paper will help immensely:

MRS. J. J. JONES,
694 Hightop street, Wynboro

Remember these things when you send your recipes to Miss Penny, at the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph tonight. She, you know, is daily awarding one $5 prize and five $1 prizes to the best recipes received. No recipes are returned.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. R. N. DAVIS,
1737 Kenneth avenue, Arnold.
PINEAPPLE CAKE

Three-fourths cup shortening.
Three-fourths cup drained crushed pineapple.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One cup pineapple juice.
Two cups sugar.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One tablespoon lemon juice.
Five eggs.
Three cups cake flour.

Cream the shortening and add the sugar gradually, and cream well. Add well-beaten egg yolks and the pineapple. Add the pineapple juice alternately with the flour, baking powder and salt sifted together. Add lemon juice and beat well. Then fold the stiffly-beaten egg whites. Bake about a half hour in layer cake pans.

PINEAPPLE ICING

One and one-half cups granulated sugar.
One-third cup boiling water.
Three-fourths cup crushed pineapple.
Two tablespoons pineapple juice.
One teaspoon vinegar.
Two egg whites beaten stiff.
One teaspoon lemon juice.

Mix sugar, vinegar and boiling water and stir till sugar is dissolved. Then cook without stirring until it forms a firm ball in cold water. Pour very slowly on the well-beaten egg whites, beating hard all the time until the mixture is stiff; then add the pineapple prin, pineapple juice and lemon juice, and beat until it is stiff enough to spread evenly on cake.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. E. J. LAWRENCE,
5708 Darlington road.
FROZEN SURPRISE

One and one-half cups orange juice.
One-fourth cup lemon juice.
One pint whipping cream.
One-half cup powdered sugar.
One teaspoon vanilla. Macaroons, maraschino cherries, sliced pineapple as desired.

Strain the orange and lemon juice together, and sweeten to taste. Pour into a mould which has been chilled. Whip the cream. Add the powdered sugar gradually, and flavor with vanilla. Fold in carefully the broken macaroons, maschino cherries and drained sliced pineapple cut in pieces. Add this mixture to top of the orange and lemon juice. Place a piece of waxed paper over the mould before placing the cover on. Pack and freeze in two parts ice and one part salt from three to seven hours. Or place in freezing part of refrigerator for same length of time.

MARION YOUNG,
301 Shields Building, Wilkinsburg.
SHRIMP SALAD WITH SLICED TOMATOES AND CUCUMBER

One can shrimps.
One cup diced celery.
Two hard cooked eggs, chopped.
One small can sweet pimentoes.
DRESSING
One-half cup mayonnaise.
One tablespoon chili sauce.
One teaspoon chopped olives.
One teaspoon chopped sweet pickles.
One teaspoon chives or minced onion.
One chopped pimento.

Wash the shrimps, marinate for an hour in French dressing. Drain, break each shimp into four pieces and add to the celery, eggs and pimento. Mix together the ingredients for the dressing and turn over the shrimps. Serve on crisp lettuce; garnish with sliced cucumber and tomato.

MARIE MOONEY,
224 Maple Terrace.
BRAMBLES

Pastry:
Two and one-half cups pastry flour.
One-half cup shortening.
One egg.
Ice water to moisten.
Filling (uncooked):
One egg.
One cup sugar.
Juice of one lemon.
One cup chopped raisins.
One-fourth cup chopped almonds.
One rolled cracker.

Mix pastry, roll about one-eighth inch thick, cut with a coffee ear lid. Place a spoonful of the filling on one half. Fold other side over like a turnover. Moisten edges and press together. Bake until well browned in a moderate oven.

MISS MARGARET PUNCHUR,
628 Shelby street, Monongahela.
RED CHERRY SALAD

One can red cherries or
One pint stewed fresh cherries and juice.
One and one-third tablespoonfuls granulated gelatin.
One cup orange juice.
One cup sugar.
Shelled pecans.
Whipped cream.
Mayonnaise.
One tablespoon lemon juice.
Lettuce.

Strain the juice from the cherries (there should be one cupful). Add the sugar and let come to a boil. In the meantime soak the gelatin in the orange and lemon juices combined for five minutes. Pit the cherries, replacing the stones with halves of pecan meats. Add the gelatin to the syrup. Put the stuffed cherries into six individual molds. Pour the syrup over while hot and when stiff serve on lettuce with mayonnaise, combined with whipped cream in the desired proportions. Serves 6 to 8.

MRS. H. M. PENNINGTON,
836 East College avenue, Penn State.
LAZY DAISY CAKE.

Two eggs.
One-half cup milk.
One cup sugar.
One tablespoon butter.
One cup sifted flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
Pinch of salt.
One teaspoon vanilla or orange extract.

Put milk and butter on range to heat. Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Beat together with a rotary beater. Stir in dry ingredients sifted together once. Add flavoring. Then add hot milk stirring carefully as it is added. Pour into a flat greased pan and bake 25 to 30 minutes at 350 to 375 degrees.

While the cake is baking stir up the topping:

Two-thirds cup brown sugar.
One-third cup melted butter.
Four tablespoons cream.
One-half cup shredded cocoanut.

Spread on the warm cake and put under broiler five to ten minutes until frosting caramelizes. This icing can be made equally well in any type of an oven.

GLOBE TROTTING

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Sad I am that one story in Sibila Hart has broken and the Globe Trotter has not been able to match 'em speaking about the "quintuplet" story.

I'll console myself with another kind of a "quintuplet" story.

One that comes from Turtle Creek, Pa., sent in by Mrs. Maury McGraw, Church street; the story of five generations, which includes Mrs. McFeely, aged 81; their daughter, Mrs. Carl; Mrs. Carl's daughter, Mrs. McGraw, aforementioned; Mrs. McGraw's daughter, Mrs. Hardy; Mrs. Hardy's son, John Hardy. A picture of the five generations accompanied the letter.

* * *

Yesterday was Aviation Day on the Globe Trotter's microphone and we were happy to present Jimmy Knight, of St. Louis, to whom Col. Lindbergh made the first proposal of his historic flight to Paris.

Mr. Knight admitted that he didn't breathe easily while "Slim" was outlining his plans, until he was assured that it was going to be a solo flight and that determined flier before him was not going to ask him (Knight) to go along.

* * *

The Navy came in for some attention at 2:15 when Seaman Cliff Warren of the Lexington steamed up to the microphone to tell us of his experience in the Navy and especially of the great fleet review in New York.

* * *

M'NAIR HEROIC IN CRASHING MEETING OF 800 REDS

POLITICS

Women to Make Last Demand for Change

By MARK SHIELDS

Determined to fight to the last ditch, a sub-committee of a group of independent Republican women who last week demanded a change in the Republican county chairmanship will meet this afternoon for a final declaration of opposition to the re-election of William H. Coleman.

Mr. Shields

Miss Hannah Patterson, who was delegated last week to present to Senator David A. Reed and Attorney General William A. Schnader the objections the women made to Coleman, will be one of those at this afternoon's meeting. Among others will be Mrs. Harvey Fouse, Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence and Mrs. Enoch Rauh.

Their prospects of making protest effective are dim, according to the prevailing opinion in political circles. Coleman wants to succeed himself and is conceded to have the votes.

In the makeup of the women's group are represented various shades of Republican opinion, principally independent in tone. Miss Patterson was vice chairman of the Citizens' League and was prominent in the mayoralty primary campaign last year of P. J. McArdle. Mrs. Lawrence has been in the past a Pinchot adherent, though there is not the same warmth now that formerly prevailed. Mrs. Walter Riggs, another interested in change, but not a member of the subcommittee, headed the woman's division of the Reed campaign in May. Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane, also of the group which met last week, performed a like service in Charles J. Margiotti's fight for the gubernatorial nomination.

May Have a Voice in Vice Chairmanship

While the ladies will make no headway in their opposition to Coleman, they do have the opportunity of a voice in urging a vice chairman.

Mrs. Laura J. Hinnau, the present vice chairman, though a candidate, is not to be re-elected. She was originally chosen through the influence of the late Mayor Charles H. Kline, and the forces now favoring Mr. Coleman have set their faces against her.

Several names crop up for vice chairman in this women's group who might be acceptable. There is, of course, Miss Patterson, a practical campaigner and organizer. While she is not in sympathy with all of the leadership of the Republican organization, she is assumed to favor the state candidates.

Then there is Mrs. Lawrence. In 1932, during the Hoover-Roosevelt campaign, Mr. Coleman saw to it that Mrs. Lawrence rather than Mrs. Hinnau did the real work among the women on behalf of the Republican ticket. That appears to present a confidence in the ability of Mrs. Lawrence.

A third suggestion might be Mrs. William Anderson, of Aspinwall. Mrs. Anderson has powerful friends among women high in Republican councils in the state. It is understood that two years ago she was Coleman's real choice for vice chairman, but at that time he was outvoted. Mrs. Anderson is reported to have stirred the present sentiment among women for a change, but it may be more because of her distaste for Senator James J. Coyne than Coleman.

A Way Chairman Can Always Hold Office

Mr. Coleman, or any other chairman, need never relinquish office if he wished to take advantage of the party rules, even though every one of the 1,800 members of the County Committee opposed him.

Rules three, four and five provide for the appointment of a campaign chairman, a finance chairman, and a chairman of a committee on meetings and speakers, together with such members of these committees as the county chairman, the appointing power, deems appropriate.

And then, say these remarkable rules, all the members of these committees shall have the same rights and privileges as a member of the county committee. That of course, means a vote.

So a chairman could appoint a couple of thousand of these people, and stay in office until Father Time finally overtook him.

This isn't necessary for Mr. Coleman. If it was, he wouldn't take advantage of the opportunity, but the possibilities demonstrate the necessity for a changing of such ridiculous rules, susceptible to abuse in the hands of an unscrupulous politician.

Plan Two Tag Days For Swim Outings

So that boys and girls from the porer neighborhoods may from time to time throughout the summer enjoy a day at Calmwood Swimming Pool, Glenshaw, Father Cox is sponsoring two tag days to raise funds for their transportation and "eats." The first will take place next Friday and the second the following Friday. He wents to send out no less than 100 children every day this summer. Father Cox wants volunter workers for these tag days and requests that they meet in Old St. Patrick's Church, tomorrow night.

CALL M'GOVERN IN POLICE PROBE

Eight Ex-Officers And Director Bell Asked to Testify

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and eight other former police officials have been called to testify at the next hearing of the Kane police research commission to be held Friday at 1 p. m. in City Council chamber.

Other witnesses listed include Louis Leff, former inspector of detectives; Robert J. Alderdice, former safety director; Leo Coleman, once an assistant superintendent of police, and Fred Will, Lawrence Bartley, Edward Brophy and Thomas Cavanaugh, former police officials.

All are to be asked how the city police department had been run in previous years. It has become apparent that the commission is not confining itself to the police affairs of the present administration.

A. Marshall Bell, Director of Public Safety, has been called to describe present conditions.

A new member of the commission to succeed Mrs. Mary C. Burnett, resigned, is expected to be appointed by City Council early next week.

Councilman John J. Kane, sponsor of the commission, yesterday announced Mrs. Burnett's resignation. She stated in a letter that it was impossible for her to serve because of enforced absence from the city on work for the State Relief Board.

PITT CAMPUS SWEETHEARTS . . . TOMORROW THEY MARRY

BOOED, HISSED, MAYOR TALKS 10 MINUTES

Sleuths Form Guard As His Honor Walks Through Hall

About 800 Pittsburgh Communists today were recovering from a head-on collision with Mayor McNair.

Appearing at a "Red" meeting in Fifth Avenue High School last night, His Honor held the floor during a 10-minute scene that was one of the most hectic ever staged in the auditorium.

Boos and hisses greeted him as he began his talk and were still coming through the building when he finished and strode up the aisle here by shouting, ridiculing Communists.

SLEUTHS FORM ESCORT

Serious trouble was averted by the appearance of a squad of city detectives, who escorted him to the street.

Waiting outside was his secretary, Theodore L. Morris, who whisked the Mayor away in his car while the shouts of the excited audience resounded in the night air.

Throwing discretion to the winds, the Mayor opened his address by saying:

"We don't want to bother with Fascism or Communism."

A voice in the gallery shouted:

"Who doesn't?"

ACCEPTS DEBATE OFFER

After the pandemonium that followed was quieted, His Honor resumed:

"You know we don't want to fuss around with a lot of Communists."

Above a volley of catcalls the same voice was heard from the balcony, demanding:

"Then what are you doing here?"

Subsequent remarks of a similar nature were greeted with jeers and boos. A gallerite asked in broken English for a chance to debate the city's chief executive.

McNair offered him half the stage, but the offer wasn't accepted.

Of communistic literature that was hawked in the audience before the meeting, His Honor said:

"When you buy those papers and magazines, someone is getting money under false pretense, for it isn't worth a cent."

The outburst that this brought on made the building tremble, but McNair held his ground, waiting quietly until it had subsided.

CONGRATULATED BY SCORE

Then raising his voice and clenching his fist, he thundered:

"If you weren't so befuddled by a lot of Russian Communists, you would have enough American spirit of fair play to let me talk."

Half way through the sentence, the crowd let loose and the Mayor shouted:

"I'll say it again till you keep quiet."

He repeated his statement four times while the audience drowned his remarks in a clamorous denunciation. The uproar did not cease, so the Mayor ended his speech with the cry:

"Don't ever ask me for free speech again."

Though the mob spirit was riding high in the audience, McNair disregarded a side exit near the stage and strode up the aisle through the angry crowd.

A score of persons followed him out the door to shake hands and congratulate him on his courage in the face of a hostile audience. To the detectives he remarked:

"If those Communists were handled right, they'd be laughed out of town."

64 Army Officers Inspecting Plants

Industrial plants in the Pittsburgh area will be inspected today by 64 officers from the Army Industrial College. The party will be in charge of Lieut. Col. W. A. McCain. Plants to be visited include the Mesta Machine Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the Jones & Laughlin South Side works, the Mine Safety Appliance Company and Mellon Institute. The tour ends Friday.

FIREMEN HURT FIGHTING BLAZE

Fire Capt. Elmer Hartman, 34, and Hoseman William McClelland, 35, both of Engine Company No. 5, were injured while fighting a fire in a two-story frame dwelling at 724 Cherokee street late yesterday.

The occupants of the house, Mrs. Annie Miller, and her three children, living on the second floor, and Ben Walker, who lives on the first floor, fled to safety.

Capt. Hartman, overcome by smoke, fell down the cellar steps and was carried out by Battalion Chief William H. Davis. McClelland suffered cuts and bruises when part of the ceiling fell on him. Both were taken to Mercy Hospital.

Chief Davis estimated the damage at $2,000.

RED TAPE SNAGS RELIEF JOBS

Red tape requirements have caused 3,000 relief work jobs in the county to remain unfilled.

So relief work division officials declared in announcing a conference to be held here today in an effort to raise the number of RWD workers to the quota approved by the state.

James L. Stuart, local RWD administrator, said the meeting will be attended by A. W. Motley, director of the State Employment Bureau; George P. Mills, county relief head; Ralph W. Gibbs, district official of the State Employment Bureau, and Deputy RWD Administrator Philip H. Lantz.

The group will attempt to remedy the situation, which has resulted in the suspension of several projects because they were inadequately manned.

Man Found Hanging From Tree on Hill

Deputy coroners today were endeavoring to identify the body of a man, about 50, found hanging from a tree on River Hill, Forward Township, late yesterday.

The body was discovered by Louis Munger, of Monongahela, while he was cutting bean poles on the hill, the deputies reported. The man apparently had been dead about three days. The figures of a sailor and a girl, holding hands, were tattooed on his right arm. He had no upper teeth.

New Heavyweight Champion Found In U. S. Senate

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The Senate Agricultural Committee looks like the next heavyweight champion.

Chairman Smith waved his big Carolina fist under Senator Muryhy's Iowa nose.

Senator Murphy waved his nose at the fist, and the round was even.

The contest lasted four hours, and was supposed to help the farmers, who will not last four more minutes.

The storm center was Rex Tugwell who is being accused of having brains.

If that is proved he will be unseated, like the Prince of Wales at the Liverpool jump.

Tugwell said he believed in the Constitution of the United States. That makes the famous document official if we can get it endorsed by the book-of-the-month club.

We will admit that the Senate Committee can really fight when it is sued by a waitress.

VERONA ROAD COMPLETED

The Allegheny River boulevard, completed at a cost of $3,535,000, will be opened for use Friday.

The road, which runs from Highland Park to Verona and Oakmont, passes through the now celebrated Nadine "bottleneck" where construction was delayed three years because of failure of former county officials to obtain a right of way.

The present opening date is 15 days ahead of schedule.

John Morgan, Son Of Detective, Dies

John Morgan, 24, of 2022 Plainview avenue, a son of Homicide Detective Frank Morgan and a brother of Detective Thomas Morgan, died at his home last night following an operation for a tumor of the heart. He had been ill eight months.

DENTIST SUES RELIEF BOARD

H. N. Shor, a dentist with offices in Pittsburgh and nearby towns, had filed suit today in Dauphin County Court to compel the State Emergency Relief board to pay $862.50 for dental services he rendered needy persons in Allegheny County.

According to an International News dispatch Shor avers that the County Emergency Relief board had ordered work done and authorized payment, but the state board held up the bill because Shor advertises.

Auditor General Frank Baldwin and State Treasurer Charles A. Waters were named co-defendants.

Boyd Named Clairton Republican Chairman

Logan Boyd was elected city chairman of the Republican party in Clairton last night. Mrs. Harriet Pritz was named vice chairman, Mrs. Esther H. Carroll, secretary, and C. B. Davis, treasurer. Ward chairman will be elected next week.

FINAL DAY HERE TO LIST TRUCKS

The Pennsylvania State Code Authority for the trucking industry announced that today is the last day for registration of for-hire vehicles under the NRA trucking code. A fine up to $500 and imprisonment up to six months is provided for each violation of the code.

Owners of such vehicles must register to obtain the new federal registration plates, which must be carried on all for-hire trucks and other highway carriers after June 28. Each day of operation without the code insignia after June 28 will constitute a separate violation.

Center Avenue Man Shot, Wife Arrested

With a bullet wound in his right shoulder, William Tatum, 50, of 1836 Center avenue, was in Passavant Hospital today in a fair condition. Police said he was shot by his wife, Nellie Tatum, after an argument over money. Mrs. Tatum was arrested on a charge of felonious shooting. Both are Negroes.

PITT GRADUATE TO WED CO-ED

A two-year campus romance will climax tomorrow night in the marriage of Saul Shapiro, 20-year-old University of Pittsburgh graduate, and Miss Freida Goldstein, Pitt co-ed.

The bridegroom-to-be, the son of Mrs. J. Shapiro, of 5517 Hays street, was awarded his diploma last Friday and plans to enter law school. Miss Goldstein, 20, is a member of the junior class at Pitt and the daughter of J. Goldstein, of 5407 Hobart street. Both earned honors at Pitt as debate team leaders.

Their romance budded after the couple had discovered they had been childhood playmates.

Sleeping Autoist Awakened by 'Law'

Chester Chapman, 26, of 5420 Claybourne street, faced disorderly conduct charges in Penn Avenue Police Station today because police said he parked his automobile in Friendship avenue, near Cedarville street, and fell asleep. Chapman objected when police awoke him.

Pool Funds Approved By Council Committee

An $8,775 fund for swimming pool operation during extra time this month has been approved by a committee in City Council. The money will be largely used to pay the wages of pool guards and attendants.

Hibernians Plan Reunion, Field Day

The annual reunion, field and Irish Day, sponsored by the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies' Auxiliary of Allegheny County, will be held in Kennywood Park, Saturday.

LIBRARY ROAD JOB URGED

A delegation representing Brookline, Overbrook, Carrick, Brentwood, Castle Shannon, Dormont and Baldwin Township was to appear before City Council today to plead for the further improvement of the Library road from Overbrook to the Castle Shannon borough line.

William E. Armstrong, vice president of the League of Boroughs, Townships, and Third Class Cities of Allegheny County, heads the delegation. He explained that the new project, about 4,000 feet of highway, represents the last portion of the Sawmill Run boulevard system between Pittsburgh and Monongahela that has not been authorized for improvement.

Since a delegation urged City Council to vote for this project last July, Armstrong stays, the cost was increased 20 per cent to $235,000.

Funeral Directors Open Meeting Here

The fifty-third annual convention of the Funeral Directors Association of Pennsylvania will open today in the William Penn Hotel with an address by the Rev. Dr. R. F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College.

Today's session opened with a breakfast followed by a business meeting. The invocation was said by the Rev. Dr. N. B. H. Moor, dean of Trinity Cathedral. Perry O. Powell, field counsel of the National Funeral Directors' Association, was to speak on "Business and Public Relations."

The Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchison, pastor of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, will also speak. Officers will be elected tomorrow.

And So City Won't Compete With His Honor

A letter from the Liberty Vaudeville Company offering to furnish entertainment features in the city parks on the Fourth of July has been received and filed in Council, Chairman P. J. McArdle said.

"There's no reason why we should furnish competition for the Mayor."

Jewelry of 3 Girls Taken by Burglars

Thieves broke into the apartment of three girls at 245 Melwood street, the Loutellus Apartments, early today and stole jewelry valued at $250 and $35 in cash. Vera Sylvia reported the loot was owned by herself, a sister, Catherine, and Catherine Dugo.

Entrance was gained through a window on the first floor.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 13.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well the latest papers record the fact that Mr. Tugwell went through O. K. They tried him for being a 'menace, and he come clear. I am glad of that. It's a mighty hard thing to tell nowadays whether an idea is revolutionary or downright conservative. Tugwell proved that he had at one time been a "dirt" farmer. I think that's what got him clemency with the jury. A soldier returning from a popular war don't carry as much sympathy as a "dirt" farmer, or for that matter even a prairie land farmer, where there aint no dirt.

Yours,

WILL.

Bird Apes Mary's Lamb, Follows Boy to School

Mrs. Rose Lillie, of New Kensington, who is staying with a friend, Mrs. Rocco Ieraci, at 515 Belgreen place, Oakland, said she was awakened by the chirpings of a bird she found in the middle of the kitchen floor.

Mrs. Lillie stated she fed it and put it out. It refused to leave, however, staying near the back door, Mrs. Lillie said.

When Richard Ieraci, 8, left for school, it followed him to class, hopping and flying behind him for three blocks, Richard said. His teacher made him return the bird to his home, and Richard left it in the back yard.

To learn what kind it was, Mrs. Lillie carried the bird to Richard's teacher, Miss Bertha Ewing, natural history instructor at the Home Public School, Oakland. Miss Ewing declared it was a young robin.

Asked if she would keep the bird, Mrs. Lillie nodded, but on the way back from the school the robin flew from her hand, perching on a high ledge of the school building.

Mrs. Lillie returned home birdless.

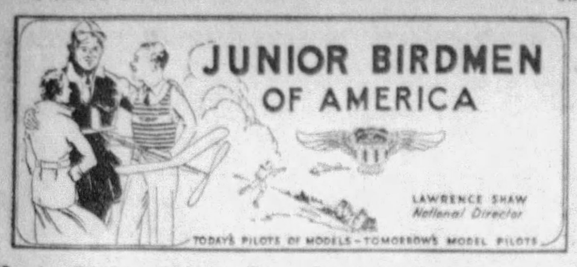
Jones Demands Apology, Retraction From McNair

Mayor McNair has received a special delivery letter from E. N. Jones, state director of the National Recovery Administration, demanding a complete retraction and apology for statements alleged to have been made by the Mayor to a group of members of the Henry George Club.

The Mayor is accused of saying that William A. Magee as Mayor fired Jones as police superintendent.

He had nothing to say about the Jones demand, but concerning a possible suit which has been threatened by Jones, he said:

"I think I need a publicity man worse than I do a lawyer."



Junior Birdmen Model Plane Institute Opens; Kits and Supplies to Be Tested and Approved

First Real Service to Model Builders Inaugurated!

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Junior Birdmen Director.

Greetings, Junior Birdmen! National Headquarters is pleased to announce the inauguration of the Junior Birdmen Model Plane Institute, the first constructive service ever offered to model builders by any organization.

With complete laboratory testing equipment and actual work shop, where hundreds of model kits will be closely inspected and actually constructed, the Model Plane Institute will soon be able to recommend to the thousands of model builders throughout the United States approved model plane kits of all manufacture and by-products for model aircraft work.

All manufacturers of model plane supplies, throughout the country, have been sent an announcement of this new service and invited to submit their models for test to the Junior Birdmen Institute Laboratory in New York, which is under the supervision of Irwin Polk, well-known for his model plane activity in this country for the last 10 years.

Official Seal Of Approval

Upon receipt of application for a Junior Birdmen Seal of Approval for any kit, a rigid laboratory test will be made of the contents including the balsa, tissue, cement, rubber, dope, wire and other materials. An actual model will be constructed in the workshop from the plans and directions included with the kit, just as it will be built by you Junior Birdmen members at home.

Upon completion, the model will be test-flown for performance. If the contents and flight meet with the standards set forth by the institute, the manufacturer of the model will be permitted to display on the kit, and in his advertisements and literature, the official Seal of Approval shown in this column.

This protective service should send you model builders into real "wing-overs" for soon you will be able to purchase kits at your local stores, bearing the official seal of the organization, and know that the contents are of standard quality and that you will have no trouble in constructing the model from the plans and directions enclosed and, if properly constructed, you will be sure of having a model whose performance is guaranteed by the seal of the institute on the kit-carton.

Nonflying Models And Materials

Non-flying models and model builders' materials, as well as kits, will be awarded the institute seal of approval, along with all other products allied to the art of model building. This, as well, will include books on model airplanes, magazines and other by-products.

The names of all products receiving the official use of the Junior Birdmen Seal of Approval will be published in this column from time to time and will be permanently filed in the Junior Birdmen Model Plane Institute Library, which will be open to visitors at all times.

Master Carson

I'm expecting to see every one of you members Saturday at the Field Pageant at the City-County Airport.

In another part of the paper today you will find a list of the stations where you can buy special passes that will take you to the airport by street car and bus. If you bought a pass last week it will be good again this Saturday.

Master Gallagher

The pictures in today's column are those of Robert F. Carson, of Irwin, Pa., who is a charter member, and Daniel Gallagher, 12, of Pricedale, Pa. Daniel is also a charter member.

Send your pictures in! We will use them in the daily column. Be sure to put your name and membership number on the back of the picture.

Happy landings!

Six Hundred "Neighbors" to be Paged and $600.00 Additional to be Given Away

"Mr. Neighbor" will page "Neighbors" every day throughout the contest and award $1.00 in cash to every "neighbor" whose name appears in the daily list with an asterisk (*) in front of it. There will be ten "neighbors" paged each day. Watch for your name in this neighborhood list. It may be paged any day and you'll get a dollar whether or not you are an entrant in the "Know Your Neighbor" contest.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The names employed in the "Know Your Neighbor" contest pictures are selected from the telephone and city directories. Only the surname is to be used . . . such as "Jones", "Smith", "Anderson", "Wilkins" . . . in writing the answer below each picture. DO NOT USE the complete names or initials as printed in the daily lists . . . just the surnames set in the larger type . . . as the parties listed are not in any way personally identified with the cartoons.

Read and Follow These Simple Rules

(1) Under the title, "Know Your Neighbor," the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will inaugurate a Cartoon Contest beginning Sunday, June 16, 1934, which will continue in the DAILY EDITION ONLY thereafter until 60 contest pictures have been consecutively printed. Beneath or contiguous to each contest picture there will be printed a list of family names and within this list will be found the correct title of each picture.

(2) The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will pay $1,500.00 in cash prizes to the entrants submitting the neatest and most nearly correct sets of answers. In case of ties equal awards will be made to the contestants so tied. There will be 441 cash prizes in all, as noted in the announcement on this page.

(3) The contest will close Saturday, August 18th, 1934, and all sets of answers must be in the office of "Know Your Neighbor" Contest Editor before midnight Saturday, August 25th, 1934. Prize winners will be announced just as soon as the judges can complete checking of the entries.

(4) "Know Your Neighbor" contest is open to all men, women and children living in the area of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, except members of the families of Sun-Telegraph and Radio Station WCAE employes are not permitted to enter. Incidentally, it is understood and agreed by all entrants that the decision of the judges shall be final. Entries will not be returned under any conditions.

(5) You do not have to buy the Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. You can see the files of this newspaper at the office of publication or at the Public Libraries, and, if you wish, make tracings of the contest pictures, which will be accepted as contest entries.

The correct answer to these contest pictures are among the surnames in these lists below. Each name with a * in front of it will receive check for $1.00 from the Sun-Telegraph.

2 BOYS MISSING AS SLAYER ENDS LIFE

KANSAS CITY, June 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Dolly Elwell, Chicago, the mother of two children, died of a self-inflicted bullet wound early today after months of brooding over the slaying of her husband, a deed of which she was exonerated.

An unsigned note found in the hotel room where she fired a bullet into her head late yesterday sent police on a search for the two children, James, 6, and John, 19 months, over whom Chicago relatives expressed concern.

TWO SONS MISSING.

Addressed to a sister, Mrs. F. Vogeltanz, Chicago, the note said in part:

"Once I had everything. A home, babies—but for one insane moment, they would still be mine. Now there is nothing for me—nothing—as I haven't the right—."

Mrs. Vogeltanz said Mrs. Elwell had taken the children with her to Kansas City two months ago. They were not with her when she registered at the hotel Monday.

PLEADED SELF DEFENSE

Mrs. Elwell shot and killed her husband, James Elwell, 35, general manager of a Chicago printing concern, last February 15.

A grand jury refused to return a true bill against her after she pleaded self defense. Shortly afterward she made an unsuccessful attempt to end her life with gas in an Indianapolis apartment.

James Cehan, Chicago, an attorney for the woman, said her husband had left a large estate.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We want to tell you an old story today, fellows!

Once there was a man who built a house—a very nice house, too. It had a beautiful hardwood door, and it was well built of brick with white wood windows and eaves, and a green shingle roof.

But he lived near the seashore, and all around him was sand. The ocean was a little distance away, however, and he thought, "How can the waves ever reach my house so far from the sea?" And so he built his house on the sand.

Only a little while later the winds blew and the storm came and the great waves in the ocean rose as high as a hill. First they leaped over the beach, foaming and frothing, and then when the wind blew harder than ever they rushed over the sandy shore and under the house. The sand washed away and the house fell down—a wreck.

There was another man in the neighborhood who built his house at the same time. He knew sand wasn't such a good foundation for a house, because the sea might wash it away. So he looked around for a better foundation.

A short distance up the shore he found some great rocks on the beach. So he built his house on the rock. It was harder to build his house on the rocks than on the sand, but he did it anyway, because he was a wise man. Then, when the same storm that washed away the other house blew the waves near his house, he was not afraid. The solid rock smashed the breakers in to foam and they poured back into the sea without doing any harm. His house was safe and sound.

It is the same way with Junior Patrol clubs, fellows. If you build your club on the rock it will be a good club for years to come. Make sure that your new members want to join the Junior Patrol. Some fellows just want to get a swell badge to wear, and then do not do any work or help others.

Now here is a letter from Evelyn Snyder of the Laurel Gardens Patrol—one of the very best Junior Patrol we have.

She writes:

"I am writing to let you know how our club is doing. We are selling household products, for which we get 30 cents on the dollar, which goes to our club treasury. We had 14 members and one visitor present at our last meeting. We are planning hikes and outdoor meetings for this summer. We have three new members and that makes 25 we have in our club."

That's swell progress, Evelyn, and we're surely proud of your club. Please write as often as you can with more news.

Regimental Day to Be Observed Tonight

A parade and review will feature the celebration of Regimental Day in the Hunt Armory tonight, under auspices of the One Hundred and Seventh Field Artillery. The parade will be reviewed by Robert Garland, president of City Council. The program will include a mounted battery drill, firing battery drill, machine gun demonstration, bareback riding, mounted wrestling and formal guard mounting.

Civic Groups Plan 'Community Forum'

Representatives of 17 civic organizations meeting in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday laid the ground work for a "community forum" similar to the Hungry Club, which would meet at night instead of noon, and took under advisement a suggestion that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt be asked to appear as first speaker.

Susan Finds Betrothal Ring in Box of Store Closed Four Years

CHAPTER IX.

Wallace was not cooling his heels at the front door. He had gone into the reception room, and when Susan came in he was standing before a framed picture of the Taj Mahal, running his forefinger along the top of the frame.

"What on earth are you doing, Wallace?"

At the sound of Susan's voice he wheeled around. "Gosh, you startled me!—Why, I was straightening this picture," he began and then gave a short embarrassed laugh. "No, you've caught me red-handed. I was looking for dust—but I was doing it only to amuse myself. It was a sort of game—"

He laughed again. "Let me explain, Susan. My father's always told me that when he was a young man, calling on a girl, he always looked around to try to find out what kind of a house she'd been brought up in, what sort of training she'd had. If there was any dust in the parlor he knew she hadn't been trained to be a good housewife." He dusted off his hands, still laughing a little.

Susan looked at him thoughtfully. She saw Wallace's father every Sunday morning in church. A short, stout handsome man with thinning dark hair carefully brushed over a head shaped like Wallace's head. In his younger days he must have looked just like Wallace. She coud imagine him going around people's houses hunting stealthily, solemnly for dust. Trying to find a good housekeeper to marry.

"I'm ashamed of you, Wallace," she said at last. "And it seems to me that you ought to have started looking for dust around here a long time, before you asked me to marry you. It's a bit late to check up on me now, isn't it, Dust Hunter?"

Puts Arms Around Her

"I'd take you even if you were a bit dusty," he answered, and put his arms around her. They sat down side by side on the ancient green sofa where the Brodericks had taken their ease for three generations. "Look here, I've brought you something."

He opened a little white box that he took from his vest pocket and held it out to her. In it was a band of platinum set with a diamond and two sapphires so darkly blue that they looked black in the lamplight."

"Let me put it on, sweetheart," Wallace leaned close, pressing his face against Susan's cheek, as he slipped it over her finger.

"It's perfect," Susan said, holding it up for him to see. "It's beautiful!"

She wondered how he had been able to produce an engagement ring so soon after he asked her to marry him. Probably he had been carrying it around with him for a long time, she decided. In all probability he had had his doubts about his feeling for her just as she had sometimes doubted that she cared very much for him.

The evening passed as so many other Wallace nights had passed. Aunt Edna and Lutie came in to tell Wallace how delighted they were to welcome him into the family, and the four of them settled down to a rubber or two of contract bridge as soon as Susan's ring had been admired and exclaimed over. At half past ten Susan brought in a pot of hot chocolate and a plate of Anna's tarts for refreshment. At 11 Wallace got up to go, and Lutie and Aunt Edna said good night and left the lovers alone.

Some floor walkers were like that, and actors. Too much of the dandy, and not quite enough of the rough-and-ready male. The thought of Mr. Sholes came into her mind as she watched Wallace set his feet into his stick-on rubbers.

The stranger's hands had been clean but not manicured, as Wallace's were. His dark hair had not been "slicked down" into a patent-leather smoothness. There had been no suggestion of hair oil or talcum powder. The way he looked, in his shabby clothes, had suited her down to the ground. He was, she told herself as she gazed at Wallace, much better looking than her fiance. Much better looking than even John. Much better looking than any man she had ever seen in her life.

Bought Long Ago

When Wallace had kissed her goodnight and gone, Susan turned back into the reception room to turn out the lights. On the floor under the sofa was something small and white that caught her eye as she entered. She picked it up. It was the little white jeweler's box from which Wallace had taken her ring. She held it under the shade of the piano lamp and read the name of the jeweler printed on it in tiny letters . . . "Ludlow and Ludlow." Below the name was the address . . . "Geary Street at West Market."

Ludlow and Ludlow. Susan remembered the store, with its plate glass show windows filled with silver and diamonds and semi-precious stones. It had gone out of business four or five years ago, soon after her junior class at high school had bought their class pins there.

If the ring had been bought at Ludlow's it must have been bought long before she met Wallace, a year and a half ago—

But the box was perfectly clean and shiny as if it were brand new. The little white velvet cushion within was spotless, and the ring itself was bright and new looking without any kind of scratch on it. If it had come from Ludlow's store before it closed it must have been carefully laid away somewhere. That much was certain, at least.

'Great on Education'

Susan's cousins, the Cullens, lived in Mills Road, six blocks nearer the downtown district than Center street. Their house was a good deal like the family itself—cheerful and friendly and comfortably large. It was square and white with a red roof and dark green shutters, and it stood next door to North High School, in which Howard, the youngest Cullen, was still a pupil, and Sara, the eldest was a teacher.

The Cullens were "great on education," as Aunt Nell Cullen expressed it, and when the children were small she and Susan's Uncle Arthur had bought the house because it was next door to the high school and only three blocks from the nearest grammar school.

Uncle Arthur's grocery store stood at the corner of the street, the cleanest and neatest grocery of its kind that Susan had ever seen. It had always been a place of great interest to her, with its shelves filled with chutney and anchovies and mushroom catsup in jars, with the tiny fountain of water that played over the green vegetables in the front window, with its delicatessen department that specialized in potato salads and baked beans and cold rice pudding made fresh every day by Aunt Nell.

Man About Town

The lowdown on why Dorothy Dell was "murdered"—Dr. Wagner, killed with her, recently drove from Palm Springs to Los Angeles (a three-hour ride) in one hour and 20 minutes! . . . The spark is sputtering over at the Helen Morgans (Buddy Mashke) . . . A United States Senator; an ex-alien property custodian; two Congressmen, and a banking syndicate are involved in the latest major U. S. scandal in the Far West! . . . Lupe Velez, who is no longer Joan Crawford's pal, is gunning for Carole Lombard . . . Herbert Marshall is being talked out of his Gloria Swanson pash-time . . . Tip to N. Y. City desks: Young John Choate, in Paris for years, is returning to Manhattan to marry which one of the Whitney girls???

John Barrymore is ill, but he has no idea how serious it is—and they are hushing the fact . . . Mrs. John Duncan, recently divorced, and Moorehead Patterson, ditto, are up-huh . . . How serious is the Lois Moran switch to George Vanderbilt, 1st? . . . Are Clair Hampton Windsor, the widow, and T. Wilkes, West Coast producer, secretly sealed? . . . Connie Bennett gave her Marquis another 100 Gs to make a flicker, saying: "I don't care if he loses it—I can deduct it from my income tax" . . . Ex-Ambassador to the U. S. Greta Garbo Visits

HOLLYWOOD, Friday June 8.—Making her first appearance on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot since "Queen Christina" was finished, Greta Garbo, in slacks and dark glasses, the other day visited the stage where "The Merry Widow" is being made. This is the first motion picture set she has been on other than one on which she was working.

Ernest Lubitsch, with whom she has been friendly since she came to America, invited her. After chatting a little with Director Lubitsch, Maurice Chevalier and Jeannette MacDonald, she watched them make a scene and then departed silently away.

Every one on the set was excited after she had left. They rushed up to Lubitsch to find out what the Scandanavian enigma had to say.

"That," he replied, "I can never tell.

Caring for Baby At Two A. M.

The other night there was a Hollywood preview of Pete Smith's new short, "Taking Care of Baby." About 2 a. m. a telphone call got Smith out of bed. Over the telephone, mixed with a baby's yells he heard a man's voice say:

"I saw that picture of yours last night. Now tell me what you do when you have to walk the baby."

Lupe Scans Offers

Lupe Velez, now free from any studio contract, says she is going to give every part the critical eye from now on.

A South American syndicate has offered to put $35,000 to her credit in a Los Angeles bank if she'll fly or sail down to Buenos Aires for two weeks' personal appearance. Choosy, R-K-O theaters are offering $6,500 guarantee per week with a 50-50 split above a certain gross.

Peace, it is said, now reigns in the marital affairs of the Weissmullers. Lupe wants Johnny to go along on her wanderings—providing she doesn't decide to stay in Hollywood and make a Columbia picture. Johnny is fixed to play the lead in R-K-O's "Three Came Unarmed," giving him a chance of becoming a real talking star instead of just yelling. So he may not want to go gadding.

Bomb Meant for Reinhardt Might Have Killed Genius of Stage

By GEORGE SEIBEL

If that bomb explosion in the castle of Max Reinhardt had happened in America, we would suspect the press agent. Here, when a star needs publicity, his wardrobe is lost or her jewels are stolen. If you took an inventory of the stolen jewels during the past 20 years, you would find that the acting profession must have nearly all the diamonds ever sold by Tiffany or Woolworth, and the only way to get any of them back for ordinary mortals is by robbery in a hotel. But in Europe people usually go to see actors because they act, not because they have just had or are going to have or ought to have a divorce. So the bomb that exploded in Max Reinhardt's Austrian Schloss must have been a real bomb intended to do damage, perhaps to main or kill the famous director.

Max Reinhardt is the greatest figure in the theater today—not that he is the greatest actor, nor the greatest stage director, nor the greatest anything in particular, but that he has more ideas and more theatrical instinct as well as organizing ability. It has been said the modern theater requires a whole theater full of Leonardos da Vinci to produce a play. Reinhardt has more of this virtuosity and versatility than any other man living.

Mr. Seibel

Reinhardt is a Jew, born in Austria, near Vienna, in 1873. He was in the banking business until he was 17, and made his first appearance on the stage in the municipal theater of Salzburg, in which lovely town he still produces many of his dramatic spectacles. At 18 he was in Berlin, where he has achieved most of his triumphs, but where he is not permitted to appear any longer. This makes it possible that he will direct one of the Shakespearean plays at the next Stratford festival, and even that he may get to America, where he can get any amount of money at Hollywood. What they will do to him afterward is another question.

HOW LUCK IS FOUND

He was an actor at first. Mephisto was one of his strong parts, along with many character and philosophical types. The story of his first big chance shows how some people get ahead in the world, just by being ready. Brahm, a famous figure in Berlin's theatrical world, was putting on a new play by Gerhart Hauptmann, "The Beaver Coat." An actor named Mueller was cast to play the important part of the old skipper. He committed suicide on the day before the production. Brahm was in a fix when young Reinhardt came forward and offered to take the part. He was letter perfect, and gave such a fine performance as the old Prussian bureaucrat that his rise from then was assured. To many people the fame of a man like Reinhardt looks like luck—but luck usually is merely being ready and knowing the lady when she comes round.

Reinhardt created many parts after that, like old Baumert in Hauptmann's "Weavers," Akim in Tolstoy's "Power of Darkness," and the philosophic Mortensgard in Ibsen's "Rosmersholm."

Naturalism was the keynote of his acting, which was in tune with the mood of the age, when Hauptmann and Sudermann were the reigning authors of drama.

REFORMERS IN THEATER

About the time he left the theater of Brahm, a new school of reformers were invading the European stage. Among them were the Swiss Appia, who revolutionized scenic art, and the German Littmann, who altered the whole architecture of the theater. Other significant names were Fuchs, Bakst, Stanislawsky and Gordon Craig, the son of Ellen Terry.

Many critics have accused Reinhardt of plagiarizing from Gordon Craig, but there is little or no relation between their work. And Craig is more of a theorist—Reinhardt is a practical man.

Reinhardt's chief contribution to the art of the theater is the sense of intimacy. This has been evident both in his "Kammerspiele," chamber drama in a small theater, and in his "Theater of the 5,000," which is much like a circus, the action of the drama taking place in the middle of the arena.

An English critic has described his idea and his influence in few words, saying:

"In Reinhardt's huge intimate theater to hold 5,000 spectators, space and the elemental passions and feelings, the subconscious memory which lies dormant in every creature, are to serve the desired purpose of attaining the big unified effect. Under Reinhardt, the theater plays the part of a dynamo containing magnetic currents that are felt by everybody. By this means the cosmic memory within each auditor is stirred, and each is brought within the action of the play."

He makes classical plays seem modern and modern plays seem classical. He has brought the intensity of the individual into the mystery and vastness of space.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Not often do we get a communication from a press agent in Japan—in fact we never did until recently. And now we have received one from Shanghai, China. However, they are both from the same man, an American, Ned Alvord, long associated with leading touring legitimate attractions in the United States. Now Mr. Alvord is in the Orient, with the Marcus Show, probably the first American revue type enteretainment ever to visit that part of the world—most of them do pretty well to get as far away from New York as Chicago. On the other hand the Marcus Show, so far as we know, never got to New York, although it has been an institution of the Middle West for several years. It even visited Pittsburgh three or four seasons back. But to get back to Ned. His first letter was relative to efforts to keep Japanese officals from expelling the company he represents. It seems that part of it was too nude for the Japanese, and it also seems that the effort was unavailing, for the latest communique contains reprints from reviews of the Marcus Show in Shanghai, where it appears to have made a big hit. And we wonder if Ned, who is a good press agent, didn't engineer the expulsion for publicity purposes.

"The House of Rothschild," George Arliss film in the Family Theater, has been doing so well that Manager J. O. Hooley has decided to hold it through today, Thursday and Friday.

Stars Still Are Finicky About Their Whims

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.—Hello! The saccharine and sentimental statements of late to the effect that there are film stars in Hollywood whose dispositions are so sweet that they never get angry and never, never show a trace of temperamentality are all plain bologna!

The admitted temperamentality is not as acute as formerly. Stars no longer kick over the sets, throw megaphones or bite directors. It should be pointed out, however, that the improvement merely indicates better self-control, not absence of emotional upheavals.

Just as a matter of example, then, let me cite a few cases.

Clive Brook cannot work unless he has his tea, piping hot, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m.—so he claims. Of course, he can work—but he won't, so there you are!

Richard Dix refuses to work after 5:30.

After George Arliss has rehearsed his picture for two weeks, that is the way it is to be filmed. The director has no say whatever, nor has the producer, for that matter.

Francis Lederer actually insisted upon eating raw fish for scenes in the Eskimo film, "Man of Two Worlds." The extras, however, got by with candy facsimiles.

Eugene Pallette has a certain way of playing Sergt. Heath in the Philo Vance mystery stories—and he refuses direction.

George Raft turns down all villainous dialogue—if he thinks it might reflect upon him with his fans.

Irene Dunne has a certain dressing superstition—a ritual that must be followed. Dresses, stockings, shoes—all must be donned in a certain order, or she returns to her dressing room to start over.

Joan Crawford must have a phonograph on the set.

Paul Muni insists that his wife be beside the camera—to tell him that he's doing all right.

So, you see—it seems that the sentimental, saccharine claims are untrue, even though they sound swell in print.

* * *

Gadding about town—Kent Taylor got himself into a strange predicament. He thought he was going to New York with Mitchell and Durant, but the studio tagged him for another movie at the minute. All his clothes were packed in Mitchell's trunk, and that went ahead to New York!... Harry Raft, M-G-M producer, has let his chest out another notch—his sonny boy, Maurice, just won the honor of writing the best playlet at Dartmouth . . . After making 2,000 tests in London for roles in "David Copperfield," M-G-M has decided to cast it in Hollywood.

Kinema-knick-knacks—"The Rear Car" as a title wasn't hot enough for the movie version, so it has been tagged the chiller "Murder in the Private Car" . . . Fox is saying nix to Shirley Temple for several weeks of personal appearances, although the studio could net many thousands on the deal.

* * *

Wandering around town—Going against doctor's orders Rosita Moreno returned to the cast of "Ladies Should Listen" at Paramount. The little Spanish beauty was slated for an immediate operation for appendicitis, but is taking the risk because she doesn't want to lose the role . . . Moe Morton is picking a dozen Hollywood cuties to high step it for a whirly-girly revue in San Francisco's Bal Tabarian hangout . . . Some sort of prize should go to Mrs. Roy Del Ruth for her ability to switch to English accent in the middle of a conversation . . . Georgie Hale, once cinema famous as Chaplin's leading woman, is trying a comeback via the Little Theater route . . . Mrs. Pat Campbell was complaining about the long hours on a movie set.

"Just imagine," she chirped, "it's after 5:30. Why, in England it's midnight—and I'm already in bed!"

Odds and Ends

THIS column lost two friends within recent days. One was a man; the other a woman. There was 50 years' difference in their ages, but they both went with the call. Death plays no favorites.

Billy La Hiff was the man. If you don't know Broadway you wouldn't know the name of Bill La Hiff. But if you ever knew anything about that funny alley you'd be aware of the name of one of the sweetest characters that ever lived.

Bill was the owner of the Tavern restaurant, an eating place of distinction. But the man was far more than the average restaurant proprietor. He was a genial companion, an understanding gentleman, a helpful adviser and—when you needed him most—a thorough friend.

I'm not handing the man flowers because he's dead. That isn't necessary in this case. Billy was, I think, one of the best-loved men in the Broadway world. So far as I know, he had no enemies. And when you can attain success on Broadway without making enemies you are in the nature of a genius.

The man did so many grand things during his life that I wouldn't attempt to list any of them here. Sufficient to relate that he helped some of our foremost figures in the sporting, journalistic and theatrical worlds to enjoy their first measures of success. If they remembered when they reached the top he told them to forget it. And if they forgot to remember—well, it was all in the game to Billy.

Charity? Say, Bill La Hiff took the word and bent it all out of shape. He was the softest touch in town. I never saw him turn anyone down, and they hit him twenty times a day. It's always been a mystery to me that he didn't give his entire restaurant away. I guess he would have done it, too, if he hadn't enjoyed eating there.

No use growing sentimental about it. Billy's gone, and that's all there is to it. But I would like to repeat the words of the fistic promoter who gazed down at the wasted body, shook his head sadly, went outside and said:

"When Bill La Hiff died, plenty of people died with him. Only they don't know it yet."...

The woman was Dorothy Dell. Dorothy was killed in as brutal a tragedy as ever I read about. Only 20 years of age. A great star in the ascendancy. Sweet and beautiful. And suddenly—boom! Hello, girlie; shake hands with Death, who takes on all comers and has never lost a decision.

It was Flo Ziegfeld who first recognized Dorothy's talent. He signed her after a beauty contest in Galveston and then placed her in the Piccadilly sketch, a playlet I wrote for the Follies of 1931. He bought a special song from Chick Endor for her use—and on the opening night of the Follies in New York Dorothy was a sensational hit.

I liked the girl, even though I was by no means convinced that she was destined for stardom. She was pretty, very pert, and she had a swell smile. Everything she said and did was offered in a Mae Westish sort of way—a very young Mae Westish sort of way. And she was no imitator, either. Because Mae didn't reach the screen until long after that Follies had closed.

The rest of the story you already know. Dorothy finally clicked in Hollywood. She did a great job in "Wharf Angel" and she knocked all of us for a loop with her superlative work in Damon Runyon's "Little Miss Marker." Her last picture, just completed, was so good that they tore up her old contract and gave her a new one. Stardom was just around the corner.

But so was Death. A party. A hasty driver. A chilling scream in the night.

Ah, no. Death plays no favorites. I wish it did sometimes. Because then Dorothy Dell would have gone on to be a hundred—and Billy La Hiff would have lived forever . . .

IN a cafe the other night, two Broadwayites were discussing new faces around the local tracks this season.

"Joe's brother is a nice kid," observed one. "He oughta be able to make some good dough for himself pretty soon."

"Aw," returned the other, "I don't think so much of him. What does he know about horses?"

"What are you talking about?" cried the first man seriously. "He knows plenty about horses. Didn't he graduate from Princeton?" . . .

* * *

SPEAKING of the races, I must tell you of a certain player who has been complaining of his luck for at least 20 years. He manages to live like a king, spend his winters in the South, eat and drink of the best—but he still complains bitterly.

About a week ago, three of his friends decided to find out what it was all about. They agreed that a different one of the three would ride back from the track with this player on three successive days—and observe his reactions. They would then compare notes and see what they would see.

On Monday, the first friend rode back in the train with the complainingest man in town. The latter gentleman held his head in his hands and cried out that he had lost $700 on that particular day.

On Tuesday the second friend rode in with him. This time the forlorn player wailed loud and long. He had lost, he mourned, more than $1,000 that day.

On Wednesday the last of the trio sat beside the waller on the train. He knew, of course, exactly what this chap had said to his two friends on Monday and Tuesday. And he asked him how he had made out that day.

"Awful," sighed the player. "Absolutely awful. I lost back every cent I made on Monday and Tuesday!" . . .

HEALY-STOOGES SPLIT!

Ted Healy and his crew of stooges, Jerry Howard, Moe Howard and Larry Fine, have dissolved their stage and screen partnership!

The stooges, striking out on their own, are signed for both short and feature pictures, while your first glimpse of Ted working by himself will be in Marion Davies' new film, "Operator 13," coming to the Penn Friday.

While the stooges' contract with Healy, their lifelong friend and business associate, expired in February, Jerry told more about it today as he stopped in Pittsburgh on his way from New York to Hollywood where, with Moe and Larry, he will make eight shorts for Columbia, a feature for the same company under the direction of Lewis Milestone, and a feature for the Warners in which James Cagney is to star.

The trio, without Healy, have already completed two shorts, "Woman Haters" and "Punch Drunks" for Columbia.

TOGETHER 15 YEARS

The friendship of Healy and the Howard brothers began 15 years ago in Bensonhurst, Long Island, when all were looking for a "break" on the stage. At that time Shemp Howard was a member of the trio that was later to work with Healy, and it wasn't for several years that Larry Fine joined the act when Shemp got a Warner contract to make shorts in the East.

The Howard boys helped Healy out one night in the Prospect Theater, Brooklyn, when his regular assistant was in his cups, and from that time on the arrangement stuck. Came such hits as the Shuberts' "A Night in Spain," "A Night in Venice" and "The Passing Show," all of which played the Alvin here, and then, when an attempted revival of two-a-day vaudeville failed, the boys were featured at the Paramount Grill in New York.

Then came an offer from the Club New Yorker in Hollywood, and they journeyed West to take the top spot on the billing in that smart rendezvous. According to Jerry their troubles began the very first night they opened in the New Yorker.

HOLLYWOOD DISASTERS

It so happened that Healy and the boys selected the day President Roosevelt closed the nation's banks to open in the Hollywood club. That, in itself, was somewhat of a wet blanket, but when the earthquake hit town the very next night, the boys decided to forget the disasters and make a short for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The short was so bad it was never released, so the quartet put their heads together and decided that something must be done as their screen future was at stake. They offered to make another short without remuneration if the studio would permit them to use their own act. The request was granted and they went to work again.

The new short was swell stuff and everybody was happy. Ted, Jerry, Larry and Moe got a contract, and, in addition to making several more short comedies, appeared in such features as "Fugitive Lovers," "Dancing Lady," "Myrt and Marge," "Meet the Baron" and Hollywood Party."

Jerry said it took a year and a half to make "Hollywood Party." They had a lot of trouble, he said. I told him I had seen the "trouble" last week.

BREAK IS FRIENDLY

According to Jerry the stooges parted company with Healy without bitterness or rancor. "Contract trouble, that's all," he said. "We're still good friends." I told him it was pretty hard to reconcile the stooges without Ted and vice versa. "That's right," he replied, a trifle pensively.

Jerry is the boy who takes all those hard knocks on the conk, and while he doesn't attire himself in the tatterdemalion makeup on the street he wears on the stage or screen, he is easily recognized, especially when he takes off that snappy Panama. Jerry's head is always shaved just as you see him in his make-believe character.

While here he is the guest of B. J. Horwitz, Metropolitan Life Insurance executive, living in Westfield avenue, Beechview. He will leave for the coast in a day or two.

Those listed today are:

SLEEPING BOY TAKEN FOR DEAD

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night, Lawrenceville police received a telephone call that a boy was lying dead at Baum boulevard and Liberty avenue.

Rushing to the scene, they found a 10-year-old Negro lad fast asleep against a stone wall with a football for a pillow.

At the police station he said he was a Juvenile Court waif and lived on Susquehanna street.

The football, he said, was a Christmas gift. He was returned to his home in the best of health.

Homestead Rejects Water Well Bids

The borough of Homestead's ambition to have a private water system is still unfulfilled. Meeting in special session last night the borough council rejected a bid of $63,000 from a New York company for the reconversion of three wells to supply Homestead with water.

$10 Raise for Chief Passed Over Veto

Chief of Police R. W. Hill of Swissvale gets his $10 a month raise and two weeks vacation despite Burgess D. J. Madigan's veto. Council, by a vote of 6 to 1, last night overrode the veto. The negative vote was cast by Councilman Ely Patton.

OCTOPUS CATCH JARS FISHERS

International News Service

NORFOLK, Va., June 13.—Paul Sherwood and M. T. Jerrold admitted today they "must have had some expressions" on their faces while they were lugging on their fishing line in Hampton Roads.

With all their might they pulled and tilted their small rowboat and both said they almost fainted when they found their catch was a huge octopus and saw it start to entwine one of its yard-long tentacles around the side of their boat. Fearing it would overturn their craft they killed it with oars. It weighed 80 pounds.

STOCKS RISE IN QUIET MARKET

NEW YORK, June 13.—Stocks continued to plod along the road to higher prices today as hopes of a "summer market" appeared to be growing in the ranks of the more optimistic speculators.

While the activity did not attain anything like that of a "bull" movement, many issues advanced fractionally to a point or more and most traders did not seem in any hurry to take profits.

COMMODITIES RISE

The strength of commodities was considered the most influential factor in the recent firmness of equities. Grains advanced a cent or more a bushel, but dropped back a trifle later under realizing. Cotton moved forward, as did silver, rubber, copper, hides and sugar futures. Bonds behaved well and the dollar pound was rather heavy.

Shares of Johns-Manville and National Lead got up around 2 points each, and issues of American Telephone, du Pont and Santa Fe were nearly as high. Others up lesser amounts included American Can, Continental Can, Auburn, Chrysler, General Motors, Bethlehem and United States Steel, International Harvester, Case, New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Great Western Sugar, United States Industrial Alcohol, Public Service of New Jersey, Consolidated Gas, North American, United States Smelting, Kennecott and American Smelting.

A Senate recommendation for the appropriation of $35,000 for a special investigation of munitions manufacturing profits did not seem to have any particular effect on stocks of this group. Some of the building issues reflected hopes of expanded business when the housing bill is passed.

STEEL MEN MEET

Ameeting of the directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute was taken as an indication that the strike problem may be near a solution. The convention of the unions at Pittsburgh tomorrow is expected to decide whether the general walkout in the industry will take place Saturday.

Expectations that Congress will adjourn next week, at the latest, tended to brighten the equity horizon. Many stock operators, as well as the public, it was pointed out in brokerage circles, have been hesitant to take an decided position in the market while uncertainties continued as to the brand of legislation which would be turned out at Washington.

For the first time in some weeks Dun & Bradstreet reported an increase in business failures. The total for the week ended June 7, was 239 compared with 216 in the five-day week preceding. Retail defaults rose to 145 against 124 a week earlier. There were two less failures, however, in the manufacturing division.

P.R.R. LOADINGS HOLD UP

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—Pennsylvania Railroad system loadings during the week ended June 9 totaled 93,796 cars, which compares with 87,155 in the week preceding and 88,750 in the corresponding 1933 period. From January 1 to June 9 loadings amounted to 2,026,846 cars as against 1,727,543 in the like 1933 period and 2,003,785 in 1932.

NEW YORK, June 13.—New York Central Railroad Company's freight loadings last week totaled 97,855 cars, compared with 90,944 in the previous week, which included Memorial Day, and 92,143 in the like week last year.

Trustees Named For Munson Line

NEW YORK, June 13.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe today appointed Edward P. Farley and Morton L. Fearey trustees for the Munson Steamship Line.

The line, taking advantage of the new federal bankruptcy act, last Monday petitioned for time in which to effect a reorganization.

The line's indebtedness totals $18,561,780. The company maintains that its assets are sufficient to liquidate the debts if enough time is extended for proper financing.

TRADE SLOWER, MAY REVIEW INDICATES

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 13.—We are now in a fair position to size up the business situation, as reflected in May statistics. Regardless of New Deal or old deal, then, let us coldly appraise the facts.

First, we find that average daily department store sales for the country, adjusted for seasonal conditions, fell from 77 in April to 75 in May. (These figures represent percentages of the average for 1923-25.)

When we allow for the addition of liquor sales, and for the fact that prices were at least 15 per cent higher than last year, we must conclude that the quantity of non-alcoholic goods sold was off sharply.

The "spotty" character of business is emphasized by the fact that New England and Pacific Coast sales were only about the same as last year, while Dallas, Atlanta and Richmond sales ran 21 to 24 per cent higher, reflecting government doles.

Second, we note that one explanation of the setback in retail sales is found in a decline in factory employment.

We do not yet have figures for the entire country, but the report for New York State is in, and the backwardness of the textile, lumber and automobile industries explains the trend—to say nothing of numerous strikes.

PAYROLLS DECLINE

In New York, factory employment fell 1.7 percent, which is considerably more than usual for the season. The adjusted figure is now 77.4 percent of the 1921 average, against 78.1 percent in April.

New York factory payrolls also declined for the first time this year.

These facts, together with the drought, are likely to bring reduced consumer purchasing power and to affect retail trade unfavorably.

One illustration of consumer buying is seen in the decline in automobile sales and production. Not only did registrations in certain counties fall off, but General Motors sales in May made a poor showing.

The big company's total sales, in number of cars, suffered an unusual decline in May. Furthermore, the sales to domestic dealers were unusually high in comparison with the sales made by a quantity unusually large for the month. These inventories have grown for five months in succession, as they did in 1929.

Advance estimates of May automobile production indicate a sharp slump. Average daily output, adjusted, seems likely to have been about 80 percent of the average of 1921-27, against 102.5 percent in April.

IRON, STEEL GAIN

Iron and steel production, however, gained largely in May. Steel ingot production rose to about 70 percent of the old normal, and pig iron output to about 83 percent.

Two facts confront us in considering this iron and steel spurt. One is the anticipatory orders to forestall strikes and price mark-ups. The other is the fact that production was high compared with shipments. Thus the increased steel-making activity is likely to be temporary, because such anticipatory buying will end soon and because stocks are accumulating.

I would estimate that May steel production was something like 25 per cent in excess of shipments during the month.

Finally, my P-V line shows another decline which indicates that products have been pressing on the markets of the country to an extent greater than the demand will stand. This barometer now stands at about 97, against 104 in January.

On the whole, therefore, May was a reactionary month—as the Stock Market rightly forecast. It looks as if the administration may have to do some more "pump priming."

The most encouraging fact was the large increase in May building permits. A large part of the gain was occasioned by two office buildings in New York City, but outside New York there also was some gain, although May normally shows a decrease.

U. S. DEBT NEAR NEW PEAK

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The American public debt will pass the wartime peak of August 31, 1919, Friday to about $27,000,000,000.

June 15 issues of 3 per cent 12-14-year bonds and 2⅛ per cent five-year notes will exceed the maturities by around $800,000,000 in the Treasury's program of raising sufficient funds to finance the recovery program between that date and September 15.

The complexion of the public debt has changed considerably as compared with a year ago. June 30, 1933 outstanding bonds amounted $14,223,267,000 as compared with the approximate level of $16,497,000,000 which will be reached before the end of the month.

Certificates a year ago amounted to $2,200,327,000. By June 30 they will be reduced to $1,637,000,000. Note issues now total $6,677,000,000 outstanding as against $4,779,000,000 a year ago. On the other hand bills have increased from $954,493,000 to $1,403,657,000.

Carnegie Metals Board Re-elected

Stockholders of the Carnegie Metals Company, at the annual meeting of the company in Pittsburgh yesterday, re-elected all individuals who served on the directorate during the past year. The board of directors includes S. A. Taylor, president; W. S. Linderman, treasurer; D. R. Fraser, secretary; D. R. Demaree, E. M. Love and J. H. Sanford.

PIRATES CONTINUE TO EXHIBIT 'IN AND OUT' PLAY

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Lopez Versatile Star.
Catcher Shines at Third.
Recalls Bresnahan, Ewing.

Age Not Halting Jones.
Primo in Horse Trade.
Advance of Shot Putting.

Al Lopez not only comes mighty close to being the best catcher in baseball today, but is easily the most versatile. The facility with which he sheds his backstopping armor and plugs up another position in an emergency makes the Brooklyn receiver almost a throwback to the days in 1904 when Roger Bresnahan, a catcher who was so good a baserunner and rungetter that he led off in the batting order played in each of the outfield positions as well as doing infield jobs for the Giants. Or to the time of King Kelly, or to that of Buck Ewing, famous earlier Giant catcher, who played third base the greater part of the 1887 season and covered other posts at different stages of his career, even pitching with success.

Al Lopez

Lopez recently subbed at both second and third bases, but to the misfortune of the Pirates, he saved his best emergency stuff for yesterday at Forbes Field. A catcher at third base in the eighth and ninth innings looked like an inviting target for the Buccaneer hitters, but all that Lopez did was to account for four of the last six Pittsburgh outs on stops and throws which would have done credit to Jimmy Collins, and which just about saved the ball game for the Dodgers. No other catcher in the majors could have filled that hole as well, and no regular third baseman could have done a better job. The value of the hustling Lopez is not confined to his exceptional catching ability. Al is not only a great catcher. He's a great ball player, with a spirit as rare as his skill.

HANDLING WES FERRELL TASK FOR PILOT

Baseball men in general are watching with interest the Red Sox situation, eager to learn whether Pitcher Wes Ferrell, brother of Rick, star catcher on the same club, will continue to fit into it as harmoniously as he has thus far.

Two American League players the other day were discussing the action of the Red Sox in taking the pitcher off Cleveland's hands. "I don't see why the Boston club wanted to buy that guy," one of them remarked. "Why," explained the other, "they just wanted to see if he can get along with his own brother."

JONES STANDS OUT AMONG AGE MARVELS

Every time Dolph Luque, Burleigh Grimes, Dazzy Vance, Jess Haines or Herb Pennock does a neat job of relief pitching, much is made of it as a great performance by one of the game's age marvels. Yet little is ever said about the pitcher who really is the most remarkable of the old-time hurlers still in service—Sad Sam Jones, of the White Sox. Luque, Grimes, Vance, Haines and Pennock are only relief men, it must be remembered, though Pennock did turn in one complete game this year. But Jones is a regular starter, and a winning one at that, despite the fact that he is older than any of the others named, except Luque.

Sam Jones

Jones will be 42 next month, and the present season is his twenty-first in the big leagues. He started professionally with Zanesville in the old Interstate League in 1913, went to Portsmouth in the Ohio State League the following year, and joined the Indians in 1914. He served with five American League clubs and pitched in four World Series. Yet there he is, still going along like a youngster. Against three defeats he has turned in six victories, twice as many as are credited to any other pitcher on the White Sox staff, and more than are boasted by some pitchers of high repute on several other staffs. Sam hasn't been picking any soft spots, either. He has beaten the Indians twice, the Browns, A's, Tigers and Boston once each, losing two games to the Senators and one to the Tigers. During his career in the big show he has won 228 games and lost 203. In spite of all that pitching he's still a pretty good bet when you want to win a ball game. Baseball has seen few pitchers who were as good as Jones at the same age.

SHARE IN HORSE FOR CARNERA INTEREST

Primo Carnera has been in a lot of strange deals, but it is not generally known that once he almost figured in what might be termed, on one side at least, a horse trade. Alfred Dayton relates that Bobby Crawford, turfman, while in Paris about five years ago, purchased a 1-year-old son of the famous racehorse Epinard for $30,000. Carnera at that time was performing in tent shows. Walter Friedman bought an interest in Primo, and, meeting up with Crawford, spoke at length about the future great fighter.

Crawford thereupon proposed a pooling of interests, offering to trade a half interest in his horse for a half interest in the fighter. Friedman had to reject the proposal because he held only a small interest in Carnera, but he hardly would have made the trade if he had been in position to do so, as he remarked at the time that the feed bills for the horse figured to be larger than for even such a giant as Primo. It would have been a tenstrike for Crawford if he had been able to get away with it, for the fighter made good and the horse did not. The horse was Follow Thru. Costing $30,000 originally, he ran in a $1,500 claiming race at Belmont Park a week ago, while tomorrow night Carnera may get more than $100,000 for defending the world title.

SHOT PUTTERS SEEN HITTING SIXTY FEET

What's going to be the limit if these shot putters like Jack Torrance, of Louisiana State, and Johnny Lymann, of Stanford, keep on cracking records every time they toss the 16-pound iron ball? That question has started a lively discussion among track coaches, athletes and fans. Torrance already has heaved the big pill the almost incredible distance of 55 feet 1½ inches. Lymann, who did 53 feet 2¾ inches in the Intercollegiates this year, is said to have beaten Torrance's mark, unofficially.

Jack Torrance

Some of the coaches go so far as to predict that the time is coming when somebody will get behind the iron sphere and send it the unbelievable distance of 60 feet. They argue that if a man of Lymann's size and weight can hit 55 feet, such a giant as Torrance, towering well above 6 feet and weighing 285 pounds, will eventually reach 60 feet. And less than a decade ago, coaches and athletes alike thought that 53 feet in the shot put was beyond human ability. There was a time when a coach was considered a dreamer if he suggested that a shot putter might one day attain 50 feet.

PITT LIKELY TO SCHEDULE MICHIGAN

By JESS CARVER

You may write it down in your little black (name your own color) book that Pitt and the University of Michigan are going to play themselves a football game and not in the too distant future. In fact, the Panthers and Wolverines may hook up as early as 1937, which, with college football schedule-making being what it is these days, is not far away at all.

It hasn't been announced by the Pitt publicity department, and likely will not be before tomorrow or Friday, but the well-known convalescent, W. (before the Don) Harrison, director of athletics, has been sojourning in the Middle West for lo! these many days and has signed a pair of contracts with other Big Ten schools for gridiron clashes with the Blue and Gold. The chances are better than 8 to 5 that Wisconsin and Ohio State, or possibly Illinois (the more one thinks about it the more likely it appears that the Illini are the ones) will be on the Pitt card in '36.

BEST DRAWING CARDS

Michigan, Ohio State, Illinois and Wisconsin, the latter because of the presence there of Dr. Clarence Portly Spears as head coach, figure to be the best drawing cards in the Big Ten, as far as Pittsburgh is concerned. Ohio State and Pitt would pack 'em in at Columbus, and the Golden Cats figure to do a good business at the gate at Madison and Champaign. A Pitt-Michigan game would be a sellout here, or at Ann Arbor either, for that matter.

While on the subject of college athletics, a good yarn has come to the attention of this correspondent, so curl up on the arm of our chair while we repeat it to you.

It happened in the Notre Dame-Michigan State baseball game recently (so our informant relates) and concerns Andy Pilney, the star Irish halfback. Pilney plays as good a game of baseball as he does football. The Notre Dames were out in front, a tremendous crowd was on hand and only one umpire was working.

OH, MR. PILNEY!

Pilney stepped to the plate with two men on. He smacked a fast ball over third base, close to the foul line. The busy umpire, who was working behind the pitcher, tore over to see whether the ball had struck fair or foul, and as he did, Pilney raced straight through the pitcher's box to the second base.

The resultant uproar from the Michigan State team approached a man-sized riot. The Spartans practically mobbed the poor umpire. That harrassed individual finally approached Pilney and inquired whether or not he'd touched first. Pilney replied:

"Touch first? Why, Mr. Umpire, you know me. I've been playing this game a long time. These guys are crazy. Tch, tch, tch . . . imagine me not touching first!"

He got away with it, too, as Notre Dame won the ball game without the aid of the screwey play.

Mason, Daughter Visit Friends Here

James (Red) Mason, accompanied by his daughter, Dorothy, who is a student at Sacred Heart Academy, Chicago, is in Pittsburgh to visit friends for a few days.

Red, scouting reports that Max Baer is not in proper condition, said he expected the Californian to defeat Primo Carnera in their title fight in New York tomorrow night.

Believe It Or Not (Reg. by U. S. Patent Office) By Ripley

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE GREAT TONGUE-TIED—Swami Seramlia is a Sadhu, a member of a saintly Hindu sect who strive for purity and 'straightness' by the fulfilment of rigorous and austere vows. He has taken a vow of silence, to maintain which he has driven a long, formidable-looking pin through his tongue. He now sits in silent meditation at the "Believe It or Not" Odditorium at the World Fair, Chicago.

Baer Explains His Idea of Percentage

NEW YORK, June 13.—Max Baer may be a hot actor and fighter, but he's not an Einstein when it comes to being a mathematician. During his box-career he has given away about 125 per cent of his earnings, if the holders of the various "pieces" of him can collect.

But listen to his own explanation:

"Sure I gave away 125 per cent, but I thought I still had 875 per cent left."

HITS REF, LOSES

HOUSTON, Tex., June 13.—(AP.)—Ralph Chong, New Orleans, scored a technical knockout in the third round of a scheduled 10-round bout with Al Salbano, Syracuse, N. Y., when Referee Phil Blake, Galveston, stopped the fight after Salbano had hit him. Chong weighed 159; Salbano, 152.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The "in-and-out" tag which has branded the Pirates since they took off for the East almost one month ago has become so pronounced that the team's followers today were fearful that the appellation would become the permanent trade mark of the club.

The log of the Pirate ship for late May and the first part of June shows consistency only in its inconsistency. The Buccos dropped five in succession and then proceeded to win as many in a row. Today they were on their way to another streak of reverses with three recorded.

GIANTS BOOST LEAD

So the fans can hardly be blamed if they become a bit lukewarm over the prospects of the club. Meantime the Giants, despite the loss of Roy Parmelee, are hitting the high spots and are four and one-half games in front of the fourth-place Freebooters.

The Buccos was trimmed, 9 to 7, by the Dodgers yesterday in the first clash of a four-game series. Neither club was impressive, but in the case of the Dodgers they are generally picked as a second-division entry while the Pirates are supopsed to be a favorite.

The Pirates really did suffer some very bad breaks in the first inning of the battle when the Dodgers scored three horseshoe tallies, yet the home boys did not take advantage of their later opportunities.

Waite Hoyt was the slab victim of yesterday's contest. Hoyt relieved Ralph Birkofer in the third and was moving along in a fine stride until things began to happen in the interest of the Dodgers. The four resultant runs decided the contest. Southpaw Harry Smythe was awarded the decision over Hoyt and the Buccos.

AL LOPEZ STARS

The third-base play of Catcher Al Lopez after he had left his regular position in an emergency seems to have saved the game. Lopez played like a star at the hot corner in the late rounds. Len Koenecke's hitting also featured. Koenecke rapped out two triples and a double.

Koenecke opened the game with a triple. He scored on Taylor's single which P. Waner trapped. A walk, two singles and another pass, this one with the bases loaded gave the Dodgers three runs in the inning. Koenecke's second triple opened the second round and Taylor produced another hit to score the run.

Five singles, by Jensen, Thevenow, Birkofer and the Waner boys coupled with an infield out yielded five runs for the Pirates and tied up the game in the second.

The Buccos untied the game in the fifth. Vaughan was hit with a pitched ball with one out and he skipped to third on Thevenow's single and scored on a force play.

DODGERS TIE SCORE

The Dodgers deadlocked the count in the seventh. Wilson singled and went to second on L. Waner's fumble. Boyle ran for Wilson and advanced on Leslie's out. He scored on Cucinello's fly to Jensen. The Buccos took the

BAER'S TRAINING METHODS ON TRIAL IN GO WITH CARNERA

MAX MAY TALK BETTER THAN HE FIGHTS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, June 13.—This ore or less overgrown village is adually filling up with the folks om the hinterlands who are arving in droves by train, automole and airplane to sit in on a tific laboratory test in the vast wl of the Madison Square Garn interests in Long Island City morrow night.

The test will be in the nature an experiment to establish hether or not a song and dance an with a predilection for wisecks and bombast and a flair for e theatrical, coupled with quesory physical fitness, can beat a ell-trained man who makes of ng fighting a serious business.

The guinea pigs are Primo Carera, of Italy, the heavyweight hampion of the world, a proud nd envied title, and Max Baer, big broth of a German-Jewish oy from Livermore, Cal., who ent from the slaughter house of he butcher business to the aughter house of the more gainful business of box-fighting.

AER ANOTHER SHARKEY?

The lippy Baer, as colorful and keable a personality as ever inaded the ring and flung insults n the face of a champion, may rove that a happy-go-lucky naure will carry a young fellow a ong way. On the other hand, he s liable to turn out to be just nother boastful Jack Sharkey, ho was known far and wide as he Garrulous Gob and who alays was bragging about what he as going to do to his ring foes nd then forgot to do it. And with Baer lacking Sharkey's ring inesse, at that.

In the opposite corner will be he biggest man who ever held the itle, Carnera. So big, indeed, that e has been known for a long time as a freak and has been dubbed he Man Mountain. So big that ver since he became a boxer he has been the butt of jokes about the size of his feet and his general generous physical proportions.

Carnera is the direct antithesis of Baer. Whereas Baer is the personificaton of the playboy, there never was a more serious trouper than Carnera, a product of the circus lots who has had a hard and torturous climb to the fistic heights. Whereas Baer laughs his way through life, the gargantuan Primo grunts and digs his way in. Whereas Baer must have his fling, Carnera is the soul of conscientious endeavor.

MAX MAY WIN, BUT—

There are those who will tell you that Baer will walk out on top of his man, wind up one from the floor and level it off Primo's chin, and that will be the end of Primo. This writer prefers to remain in the ranks of those conservatives who believe honest work in the gymnasium still is its own reward, and that Carnera's superior boxing skill will bring him home the winner, that Baer will be quite at sea against the speed and boxing skill of his opponent and that he will be a sadder and wiser Maxie when the final round is over.

It is funny how fistic opinions change. Before Carnera knocked out Sharkey last summer the general idea was to laugh off the Italian as just another big lummox. Hadn't Sharkey given him a boxing lesson once before, and didn't he figure to repeat? And didn't he repeat for five rounds, and then more or less deliberately plant himself and pose for the pictures as Primo walked up to him and took his time measuring a right upperout to the jaw from which Sharkey pancaked himself for the count of 10 to surrender the title? And, after it was all over, didn't Carnera's most serious detractors do an about-face and say it would be a long time before anybody would come along to menace the big fellow's reign, although Baer had just knocked out Max Schmeling a few weeks before?

STEAMUP INCREASES

And now, all of a sudden, Baer is supposed to be the Man of Destiny, who will take the big Carnera man into camp, for all of his seemingly careless training.

Well, it's conflicting opinions that make a fight or a horse race. You take your Baer and I'll take my Carnera, and we'll see what's what when the returns are in.

The two actors in the cross between a drama and a comedy have finished up their training and now are simply marking time until they step under the lights before what promises to be a capacity crowd and a half-million-dollar gate. Meanwhile the steamup continues and the folks are in a lather over their meeting as they haven't been over a heavyweight title battle in a long, long time.

There is talk of a repetition of the Jack Dempsey-Jess Willard fiasco at Toledo, 15 years ago—how time flies!—when the little fellow knocked down the big fellow seven times in the first round and just missed a knockout in that first session. But there is this difference, which must not be overlooked: Willard was poorly trained and underestimated his foe, and Dempsey was trained to the minute.

This time it is the champion who is trained to the quick and the challenger who has been pronounced not ready by such an eminent authority as Bill Brown, member of the New York State Athletic Commission, who is a health builder of many years' experience.

And there is only one year's difference in the ages of the rivals and the champion is no shopworn veteran. On the contrary, Carnera has engaged in two 15-round bouts, with Paulino Uzcudun and Tommy Loughran, since he won the title after Baer's last fight, while Baer has been playing and idling all of this time.

These factors mean more than a few weeks of intensive preparation just before a big fight.

FOOTBALL COMPARISON

Well, anyway, what's the use of arguing? Tomorrow night will tell the tale, and the clinic will be interesting to observe from the ringside. Baer may hang one on Carnera's chin, but he'd better do it early, for, if he doesn't, he'll find himself in the same position against Carnera's boxing as the football team that has to depend on trick plays and forward passes finds itself in when it meets up with a rival eleven that is well grounded in fundamentals and packs a lot of power.

The score usually is about 76 to 6 in favor of you know which team.

The fight will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company and will go on the air at 10 o'clock, daylight saving time. Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund will receive 10 per cent of the net receipts.

Rooney Ordained To Priesthood

Dan Rooney, former well-known local athlete, was ordained to the priesthood yesterday at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception Church, Washington, D. C. Father Rooney will say his first mass at the Church of the Annunciation, North Side, on Sunday.

Father Rooney starred in football and baseball at Duquesne University and was a crack local sandlot performer. He was one of the best amateur boxers in the district and was outstanding as an all-round athlete. He is a brother of James P. Rooney, former Pitt star, recently re-elected to the State Legislature, and of Art Rooney, prominent sportsman and president of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Professional Football League.

Hoffman Opposes Morgan as Second

NEW YORK, June 13.—(INS.)—Ancin Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, today served notice that he would enter an official protest with the New York Boxing Commission against the use of Dan Morgan as chief second in the corner of Primo Carnera at the world heavyweight championship fight here tomorrow night.

Morgan is one of the best connected boxing men in the East. Too well connected in the opinion of Hoffman, who bases his objection on the fact that Morgan and Commissioner William Brown are close personal friends.

Vines Advances To Semi-Finals

CLEVELAND, June 13.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines gained the semi-finals in the singles play of the Western professional tennis tournament yesterday by defeating Horton Bernstein, of New York 9-7, 6-3, 6-1. Bernstein was eliminated from further singles competition.

Bill Tilden and Bruce Barnes, of Austin, Tex., took three straight sets from Phil Greenstein and Willis Fulton, of Cleveland in the doubles, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

LASKY DEFEATS LEVINSKY

LOS ANGELES, June 13.—(AP.)—King Levinsky nursed a badly battered body today, the result of a wild, but losing bout with Art Lasky, Minneapolis heavyweight, here last night.

The 198-pound Minneapolis mauler outpointed the Kingfish from start to finish in their 10-round bout, which had the crowd of 11,000 cheering and jeering madly. He won seven rounds on Referee George Blake's count, with two to the Chicago fish peddler and the odd one even.

Crowding Levinsky closely throughout, the Minneapolis Hebrew scored heavily with clubbing rights to the body and sweeping lefts to the head. He had the 204-pound Chicago battler groggy in the eighth and again in the tenth.

Philly Tournament Near Final Rounds

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—(AP.)—Players in the Pennsylvania and Middle States tennis tournament are scheduled to finish the singles matches and engage in the first round of the doubles today on the Cricket Club courts.

This ambitious program was decided upon by officials late yesterday after rain caused postponement of all scheduled singles matches.

Camilli Fails To Join Phils After Trade

CHICAGO, June 13.—(AP.)—Don Hurst, who was obtained by Chicago in a trade with Philadelphia, was in the Cub lineup yesterday, but Dolph Camilli, who was given to the Phillies in the exchange, was conspicuously absent.

Camilli failed to report to Manager Jimmy Wilson, of the Phillies, and Cub players said they had not seen the young first baseman since the Cubs' Sunday game with the Cincinnati Reds.

PRIMO RIVALS MAX BAER AS LADIES' MAN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Regal State Building where the commissioners from New York, Illinois and California held their powpow yesterday was the nearest thing to a Hollywood theater in the throes of a premier I have seen since I came to New York. Not that the commissioners were the attraction. Goodness no! All of them stayed in the background while Max Baer and Primo Carnera were handing out autographs to the assembled multitude.

I tagged along at the heels of my favorite commissioner, Dr. Harry W. Martin, and was lucky enough to ride up in the elevator with Carnera, the Italian giant and present holder of the title of champion heavyweight of the world. Carnera looked in the "pink." He had a good color, his eyes were bright, and he had a smile for the stenographers who surrounded him the moment he stepped out of the elevator.

PRIMO WELL PROTECTED

He said he had a slight sore throat, which was later verified in the commission doctors' report, but that otherwise he never felt better.

Primo, completely flanked, surrounded and protected from all intruders, managed to ask me if I was writing anything about movies. I explained I was taking a holiday and writing about him and his boy friend Maxie while I am on a vacation.

Primo wasn't allowed to do much talking. His head worriers keep a watchful eye on him just so he won't give them the slip—and slip is what I mean. There is a classic story that the giant Italian, on the very night before his bout with Tommy Loughran, ran away and went buggy riding with two ladies.

The "little" boy from sunny Italy, it appears, likes his girl friends in Paris. He is seldom seen with one cutie, but according to this reporter's observations, he does his prancing with a couple of queens, usually blondes.

HAS WAY WITH LADIES

While the news hounds have been hounding Maxie Baer and pitying Jack Dempsey for his hard job in keeping him under lock and key, Primo's amours have entirely escaped the vigilant committee of scribblers.

In his own way, Primo is as much of a lad with the ladies as is the Livermore butcher boy. While the Italian was making a picture at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, he always had several pairs of girls waiting for him on the sidelines. Not a word was said about Primo's lady friends, but every time Max went out stepping with a Hollywood babe, he was credited with one more feminine scalp to his already amply decorated belt.

CREWS OF WEST FIRST CHOICES

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 13.—(AP.)—If the early betting odds are a safe criterion, Washington and California will fight it out for the varsity championship of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta Saturday.

The latest call-over in odds showed Ky Ebright's Golden Bears quoted at 3 to 2 and their far western rivals, Washington's Huskies, at 2 to 1.

Although beaten by Washington early this spring, California has impressed eastern observers in preliminary workouts on the Hudson. Washington has been credited with the fastest semi-official time for the full four-mile row, 19:07, but there were reports that Cornell had shaded 19 minutes on Monday. Coach Jim Wray, of the Ithacans, declined to confirm or deny these rumors.

Rusty Callow's Pennsylvania boatload was clocked in 19:59 for the full course yesterday, best time of the day. The Quakers might have done much better except for a ferry swell that brought the shell almost to a stop at three miles. California worked the course in about 20 minutes, and Navy and Syracuse also went over the route they will travel Saturday.

POLO TILT TONIGHT

To the Sports Editor:

I suppose you know they have an exposition over in Chicago, as I hear there has been something in the papers about it lately. Well, the show is a great one, and it is a good thing that both leagues have teams in Chi so the boys will get a chance to see this year's edition. I got a chuckle when I heard how half a million school kids stormed the gates and crashed in so they couldn't even collect the nickels from the kids. You fans who see thousands of kids storm the ball parks on kids' days in the different cities know how many 5,000 looks like. Just imagine half a million of 'em. If I saw that many kids running at me I would start running, too—but in the other direction.

Regards,
Honus Wagner.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—Which pitcher scored the only shutout of the 1933 world series?

2—Name the two American League pitchers who have twirled three shutouts in four days.

3—Why did the Pirates and Red Sox play an unofficial world series in 1903, and why was there no world series in 1904?

4—What was the real name of Tommy Ryan, former world heavyweight champion?

ODDS FAVORING AILING PRIMO REDUCED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Everybody having recovered a measure of composure after a series of alarums and excursions, the opera bouffe heavyweight championship engagement between Primo Carnera and Max Baer, wind for sound, went out of its patter and into its dance today with the town and its prize fight suddenly catching that last-day carnival touch of the just-before-the-battle spirit.

The principals following yesterday's physical examination here, had returned to their respective camps, there to meditate deeply until called into town for the weighing-in tomorrow. Hotels were filling with overnight guests. There was an argument for every street corner and a sap for every trimmer. The latter held some choice locations and were asking as high as $125 a pair.

The fight, it seemed, already has sold itself well back toward the thirtieth ringside row, with Rees forming steadily in front of the windows and the promoters gloating over the prospect of a $400,000 gate. Everything, in fact, seemed just splendid.

PHYSICIAN DISTURBED

But I can't forget what I heard one of the examining physicians say about Carnera yesterday in an off-the-record talk following the official check-up at the commission.

According to this doctor, who had listened with stethoscope and tapped with hammer, the champion's indisposition may turn out to be by no means as trivial as the official report indicated. The illness was diagnosed as pharyngitis, or just plain frog-in-the-throat at the corner drug store, but it can and might move down into the chest overnight. And if does, says he, Carnera is licked.

That, anyhow, was the man's story or, at least, part of it. The rest being that if the ailment settles in the chest, the victim will have great difficulty in breathing and that, if he happened to be hit on the chest in that condition, he probably wouldn't survive the blow. As an afterthought, he added that Carnera has been taking treatments three times a week for sinus trouble.

So this apparently greatest of heavyweight fights since Dempsey and Tunney, but certainly the most preposterous of them all, proceeded upon its preposterous way today, a prey to vague uncertainty, doubt, indecision and downright alarm.

BAER IN BEST FORM

A week ago, Baer was declared unfit to fight by Commissioner Bill Brown. Today, he's apparently in better physical condition than Carnera and, frankly, everybody is beginning to wonder what it's all about.

Jack Dempsey is to be in Baer's corner tomorrow night. In Carnera's corner will be Louis Borsi, who used to be a rate clerk or receiving teller or something in a bank; anyhow, I'm pretty sure he wasn't a chief-second. But he has announced himself as same for tomorrow night, Carnera's regular chief-second, a Mr. Duffy, having been unfortunately detained out of town.

In view of all this, it is not surprising that Carnera now is a receding favorite in Jack Doyle's book at odds of 13 to 20, with Baer still being held at 6 to 5. Further than that, one may have odds of 2 to 1 that Baer does not score a knockout and 2½ to 1 that Carnera doesn't. But if you think this is one to bet on, I'd really recommend something conservative like good, old-fashioned oil stock.

Promoter Jimmy Johnston, of the Madison Square Garden, has announced that the cash in hand sale of fight tickets reached $275,000 this morning. Yesterday was the biggest day of all for the sale. He estimated today that the bout is now destined to reach or surpass the half-million mark.

Helen Wills Ready For European Trip

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—(AP.)—Helen Wills Moody has packed her bags for departure tomorrow for the international tennis championships at Wimbledon, England, and said definitely she hoped to be playing again by next year.

Mrs. Moody will attend the Wimbledon tournament in the role of spectator and sports writer.

The back injury which caused her to default to Helen Jacobs in the national finals at Forest Hills last year has left only a slight soreness now, and the former champion hopes soon to begin playing as an experiment.

She will arrive in New York next Monday just in time to sail on the Europa and expects to return here by mid-July.

Protest Board Named For Softball Play

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI, Softball Tournament Secretary

Three prominent local sportsmen have accepted invitations to serve as a protest committee for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual amateur softball tournament, play in which got under way last Monday. They will pass on all protests and their decisions will be final.

The personnel follows:

Dr. I. G. Batchaver, former Allegheny County Basketball League president.

Bob Waddell, former Carnegie Tech head football coach.

John Maloney, motion picture executive and keen sports follower.

No protests will be considered except on misinterpretations of rules, and teams must finish their games under protest to receive consideration. No team which walks off the field over an argument will receive a hearing. A $5 protest fee must accompany all protests to eliminate petty grievances. This fee will be returned if the protest is allowed, otherwise it will revert to the tournament fund.

All protests must be made out on form sheets to be supplied the managers.

A majority vote of the board will constitute a decision, from which there will be no appeal.

Carnera Impresses Corum With Seriousness, Form

By BILL CORUM
Universal Service.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 13.—The ancient oaks above the ring stirred in the gusty breeze and lifted their leaves to the needed rain. Called a voice:

"Time!"

Grunted the giant, as he slipped through the slack and sagging ropes.

"Good, that is enough. It is finished now and I am ver' happee that I am not cut or hurt."

Then he pulled a soiled towel across his wide-as-a-barn-door shoulders and went padding across the grass to the gymnasium with the first drops of rain washing the sweat from his swarthy face and ponderous, almost unbelievable arms.

CARNERA IS READY

Primo Carnera, champion of the world, was through with his training for the 15-round title bout with Max Baer in Long Island City tomorrow night.

He was through. He was glad. He was ready, and he was an exceedingly cool and confident champion. Pay no heed to reports and rumors that have him otherwise. Pay no heed to Baer's prattle that his (Primo's) sleep is made fitful with dreams of the big bad Baer.

Carnera is on edge, but he is not visibly worried. Whatever else the mountainous man with the gargoyle grin is, he is not afraid. Or if he is, he keeps it his own secret. I have seen more than one man go out to fight for, or defend the heavyweight title, and, up to the hour of writing, Carnera comes nearest to Tunney in calm and poise.

Lonesome and a little bewildered, maybe, but not afraid of Baer or any man that walks. He has his heart set on victory in this fight, and the probabilities are that Baer will have to knock him very dead indeed if he plans to keep him on the canvas.

PRIMO NO DUMBBELL

He is no dumbbell, the big fellow. He is come a long way from the road to Rome and the days when he wrapped his feet in rags too poor to buy shoes to fit them. He has come a long way and on that strange route he has been derided and cheated and made fun of beyond his just deserts. He has been made a circus clown and an unknowing participant in sinister, dirty, crooked fights and, by and large, he has had none the best of it.

By and large, too, he has come through these unhappy experiences cleaner and better than many another would. Because of his tremendous size there is a natural tendency to hoot and hiss and jeer Carnera in the ring. Let's not do that tomorrow night. He hasn't got it coming.

It is true that there is a certain dignity about the big man sitting here on the rubbing table chatting with us that Baer, his real and real rival, does not have. A certain dignity and seriousness. So sincere is he so anxious to please and be polite, so determined to be a credit to himself, his country and his countrymen, in this fight, that you cannot help but wonder if far, far back somewhere there is not a touch of the blood of the emperors in him.

Make no mistake on this count. If Primo Carnera is a freak and a bit mountebank, it is not because he means to be. There is pride deep in him and always he wants to be the gentleman and sportsman and to be liked. There is a touch of tragedy, I think, in the fact that he has no close friends or friends around him. He is a lonesome fellow, or I miss my guess.

FIGHT RESULTS

BRICKER LEADS JAEGER IN GOLF DUEL

By TOM BIRKS

Jack Bricker, of Western Reserve University of Cleveland, was leading his teammate, Jack Jaeger, at the end of the first 18 holes of their 36-hole tri-state intercollegiate golf championship at the Mt. Clair Country Club today by a 4-up margin. The second 18 holes will be played this afternoon.

Bricker piled up an early advantage at the end of the first nine holes, reaching the turn in the morning round 4 up on Jaeger. The cards:

Bricker (W. R.)	444	444	444—36
Jaeger (W. R.)	444	444	444—36
Bricker (W. R.)	444	444	444—36
Jaeger (W. R.)	444	444	444—36

Two big surprises marked yesterday's play in the quarter finals. Johnny Wasco, Pitt sophomore star, defeating Johnny Warman, of Wash-Jeff, the medalist, 4 and 3. Before the gallery had recovered from the match, Charley Wallace, of Western Reserve, had come through with a 3-and-2 victory over Rogis Wolf, Pitt ace.

Bricker had an easy time stopping Wayne Goldberg, of Waynesburg, 6 and 5, and Jaeger easily disposed of Charley Kay, of Carnegie Tech, 6 and 5.

When the afternoon semi-finals got under way it was a matter of Wasco, former Montour Heights caddie, trying to hold the local lad against three Western Reserve players. Wasco put up a valiant fight but his putting was wretched. He three-putted five greens that lost him the match, 2 and 1. Jaeger shooting four birdies on the last nine to win.

Bricker and Wallace put on a good match in the other semi-final, Bricker winning, 1 up.

Pitt officials running the tourney were faced with a tough problem previous to the playing of the semi-final round when Jaeger intimated that he did not think he would stay over to play in the final should he prove successful over Wasco. Jimmy Hagan had to use all his persuasive methods before Jaeger could be induced to agree to stay over.

POWLEY FIGHTS OLD HOODOO

Still seeking to break the hoodoo that apparently is following Harry Powley, Manager Dinty Moore, of the Parmelee nine, is going to send the Verona fast ball king against the J. J. Vaughans this evening as the teams clash in a City League fracas at Frick Park.

Powley, who flashed his swifter over the plate enough to warrant him getting a tryout with the New York Giants, later being sent by John McGraw to Bridgeport, has not been getting the same results from his pitching activities since he started playing the outfield on off nights.

LIKED BY McGRAW

McGraw thought highly of the Verona boy, and told Honus Wagner that he believed Powley was one of the best looking prospects ever to wear a New York uniform. Bridgeport started the lad of sending Harry to the outfield when he wasn't pitching, because his hitting power was too great to be wasted on the bench.

He ran the bases with brains and speed, too, so instead of sticking to his pitching, he found himself drafted to the outfield. Since his return home, Manager Moore is using him somewhere in the lineup, but apparently this is affecting his speed when on the mound.

While Parmelee and the Vaughans are fighting it out, Homewood will be battling with Dormont at the High School Field with second place in the league standing involved.

MT. OLIVER WINS

In last evening's City League engagements, Mt. Oliver defeated Homewood, 10 to 8; the Vaughans upset Parmelee, 12 to 7, and Books routed Beltzhoover, 16 to 6. The Books put together six runs in the second inning to sew up the game with Beltzhoover. Vaughans scored seven runs in the second to take a big lead over Parmelee, and Mt. Oliver slugged away at the offerings of Bruce and Miller to nose out Homewood.

In the Greater Pittsburgh circuit, Ambassadors downed Verhovays, 4 to 3; Resurrection walloped Wilkinsburg, 18 to 8; Immaculate Heart took the Union Printers, 13 to 5; Mellon Stuart continued its fast pace by beating the Knapils, 2 to 1, and the Car Pontios downed the Native Sons, 7 to 5.

STARS TIED FOR HOMER LEAD

ZEKE BONURA, KLEIN BOAST 15 EACH

Associated Press.

Like most everything else in big league baseball this season, the home run battle has developed into a close and protracted scrap. With the rise of new clouters to rival the old standbys, Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig and Chuck Klein, about a third of the season has passed without giving any indication of who among a half dozen leaders will emerge the champion.

When Klein swatted his fifteenth home run yesterday in the course of the Cubs' 6-to-5 decision over the Phillies it put him on even terms with the sensational newcomer, Zeke Bonura, of the White Sox, the reliable Gehrig and Mel Ott.

HOMER WINS GAME

Klein's homer came with two on in the third inning and helped offset the five runs the Phils scored off Jim Weaver in the same frame. Chicago took the lead in the fourth and held it with the aid of Bud Tinning's fine relief hurling.

Meanwhile Ruth broke a week-long drought with a home run which would have been his tenth if it had counted. Rain nullified the blow and all the rest of the Yanks' and Browns' four innings of labor when it halted the game in the first half of the fifth.

Jim (Ripper) Collins, of the Cardinals, smacked homer No. 14 to aid St. Louis in a 7-to-3 conquest of the Braves. He joined the reserve line of the home run battle with Foxx, just one behind the leaders, and incidentally contributed three runs to Paul Dean's seventh mound victory.

GIANTS VICTORS

These developments failed to alter the National League situation much, for the league-leading New York Giants trounced Cincinnati, 12-1, collecting 19 hits, of which Pitcher Fred Fitzsimmons contributed four. Brooklyn's four-run rally in the eighth gave the Dodgers a 9-7 decision over Pittsburgh.

The only American League game which escaped rain in the East saw Detroit's league-leading Tigers pound out a 4-2 decision over the Red Sox behind Tommy Bridges' seven-hit flinging. The defeat dropped the Red Sox into sixth place.

STATE LEAGUE LEADERS TIE

The stay of the Washington nine of the Penn State Association in first place in the league's pennant chase is over, for the time being at least. After a valiant battle with Charleroi and Jeannette, the Washingtons toppled into second place yesterday as they bowed to the Jays, 6 to 0, the latter slipping into a tie for the first position with Charleroi.

Compton, on the slab for Jeannette, limited Washington to five scattered hits, struck out seven and did not issue a base on balls.

Charleroi kept pace with Jeannette by nosing out McKeesport, 3 to 2 in a hurlers' battle between Peckham and Lee. Monessen lost to Greensburg in a free hitting game, 13 to 10.

The hottest race today in the Mid-Atlantic League, peculiarly, is at the bottom of the standings, instead of at the top.

Charleston and Wheeling, tied for seventh place, have been seesawing for the cellar position and next-to-last, with no prospects of a definite decision until one of the two teams starts a sustained winning or losing streak.

The last four days of competition between the league leaders has failed to produce any material change in the league leadership, the Dayton Ducks being as firmly established as ever at the top, and Beckley and Johnstown in the same position as five days ago—tied for second place.

Dayton rounded out its serics with Beckley by downing the latter 5-3 yesterday. Johnstown reentered the second-place tie with an 8-7 defeat of Huntington.

The new last-place tie resulted after Wheeling defeated Zanesville, 4-3, and Springfield took over the Charleston Senators, 7-2. Noonan's home run with two on in the seventh inning was an outstanding factor in the Springfield victory.

NET TOURNEY COMMITTEE NAMED

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

A large and representative general committee has been named by Chairman Frank S. Smith to aid in the conduct of the forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, beginning on the clay courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club next Saturday afternoon. Twenty-seven district racquet leaders, affiliated with most of the clubs of the P. T. A. and drawn from several generations of performers, comprise the group. The list follows:

John D. Beatty, Stanton Heights; J. Phillips Davis, Stanton Heights; Austin Famariss, College Avenue; George D. Henderson, Stanton Heights; L. H. Tippins, Stanton Heights; Robert C. Schmertz, Stanton Heights, president of the P. T. A.; Howard J. Burgwin, Pittsburgh Golf Club, official referee; Charles Lockhart, Pittsburgh Golf Club; Robert A. Applegate, Harry Seymour, W. McCook Reed, Keystone A. C.; David I. McCahill, P. A. A., donor of the McCahill cup; J. Don Mattern, University Club; J. Howard Moore, College Avenue; Dr. David L. O'Loughlin, P. A. A.; Herbert M. Rinehart, Stanton Heights; Don L. Monjot, Belmont Tennis Club; Edward D. Seitz, Trafford; Thomas A. Robinson, Fox Chapel; Dr. William S. McElroy, P. A. A.; Paul G. Sullivan, P. A. A.; George C. Burgwin, Jr., Pittsburgh Golf Club; Howard Campbell, College Hill Tennis Club; John H. Miller, Jr., College Avenue; William J. Clardy, Westinghouse Club; J. M. Dixon, Rockwood; James MacKay, Minnetonka Canoe Club.

ARKLE NOT SET

Word received from Austin Famariss last evening indicates that B. F. Arkle, blond Wheeling ace, who copped West Penn honors in 1932, will not be on deck to contest for the title this year. Arkle stated to Famariss over long distance telephone that he is being held close to his home town by business interests and that he aims to go to Charleston for the West Virvinia State closed championships, a three-day affair. Incidentally, somebody's wrong on this W. Va. get-together, for it's a sanctioned tournament and originally was billed and advertised to run from June 13 to 16. For one reason or another it has been shifted back a week and now conflicts directly with the latter days of the Western Pennsylvania conclave, a direct violation of the spirit and probably the letter of the U. S. L. T. A. schedule code.

Men's singles entries will be received by Chairman Smith at his office in the Frick Building until 5 p. m. tomorrow. He may be reached by telephone at Atlantic 2800. The men's, women's, and mixed doubles and the women's singles lists will remain open till Monday evening.

ALUMNI WIN

Duquesne oldtimers demonstrated yesterday that they still wield capable racquets by blanking the Red and Blue varsity net squad, 7-0, in sports feature of the annual Duquesne Alumni Day fiesta. Only Pete Petruska, of the undergrads, was able to grab a set from the veterans and even he found the going too rough with Jim Creighton, of the class of '26, the reliable Mount Washington star, ultimately coming through at 8-10, 6-0, 6-3. Capt. Bill Purcell and Ray Higgins made their final bows as Hilltop performers. The summary:

Singles—Paul Sullivan, '25, defeated William J. Purcell, 6-2, 8-6; James F. Olko, '28, defeated Roy Getz, 6-1, 6-1; James F. Creighton, '26, defeated Bernard Petruska, 8-10, 6-0, 6-3; Sam Keller, '27, defeated Ray Higgins, 6-2, 6-0; Frank Casey, '33, defeated Jay Fagan, 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles—Casey and Sullivan defeated Purcell and Fagan, 6-3, 6-3; Olko and Creighton defeated Ed Rowan and Cal Dean, 6-2, 6-1.

PIRATES' PLAY INCONSISTENT

lead again in their half. Vaughan beat out a hit with one out and he scored on Suhr's double.

Lopez's single in the eighth was the signal for a four-hit attack and the Dodgers made four runs, aided by a base on balls and an outfield fly. The Pirates picked up a run in the ninth on Vaughan's single and a double by Lavagetto who batted for Jensen.

Chillysauce

Casey Stengel and Chick Fraser, who assists Casey in handling the Dodgers, are tickled with the spirit shown at all times by Catcher Al Lopez.

Owing to injuries sustained by members of his club, Stengel has no extra infielders so he has been using Lopez on the first defense repeatedly. Al tossed aside his mask and other catching tools in the eighth inning of yesterday's game and moved to the third base position.

It so happened that Lopez was called upon to make four tough plays, the last of which would have done credit to Traynor at his best. Al dove sidewise, scooped a hot grounder off Tomm Thevenow's bat and came off the soil with the ball in one hand. His ride-like arm did the rest.

Boss Casey has no hesitancy in saying that Lopez is the best catcher in the National League and Fraser is just as enthusiastic. Said Casey:

"If they are looking for an all-star catcher for that championship game next month, they do not need to go farther than Al Lopez. He is the type needed in that sort of a contest. Spirit is what wins ball games and Al is loaded with hustle."

Manager Gibson stated last night he is likely to put Fred Lindstrom and Harry Lavagetto back into action any day. Cookie is ready to go to the keystone post, while Lindstrom could play if necessary. His broken finger practically is healed.

Hennigan to Box Louis Di Santis

Patsy Henningan, of Clairton, has been signed to box Louis Di Santis, of Cleveland, in one of the three five-round bouts at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night.

Irish Jimmy Ferry boxes Al Farone in another five-rounder and the other one remains to be arranged.

Anson Green boxes Paul Pirrone and Dominic Mancini engages Jackie McFarland in two 10-round feature events.

+ OBITUARY +

Lewis M. Moore

Lewis Morgan Moore, 84, of 100 Seventh street, brother of the late Mrs. Mary Moore Davis and long well-known in Pittsburgh, died early today in Allegheny General Hospital. He was born in Pittsburgh, the son of Alexander and Maria Morgan Moore, February 24, 1850.

Known as "Lew," Mr. Moore was employed in the City Assessors' office until a year ago, when he was retired. He was a salesman, last working for the old Zug Iron Company, until 1914. He was an amateur baseball player in the decade following the Civil War, and later assisted in the establishment of professional baseball teams, being an intimate of the late Sam Crane.

Mr. Moore was a Mason and Shriner and an honorary life member of New York Lodge No. 1, B. P. O. Elks, which he joined more than 47 years ago. He was the husband of the late Mrs. Mary Alexandra Betker Moore and leaves two daughters, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Mrs. Jessie F. Kneedler.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jessie Frances Kneedler, of Bellevue, who died Tuesday, will be held in her home, 74 North Euclid avenue, at 3 p. m. tomorrow. She leaves her husband, Dr. G. C. Kneedler, and her son, Dr. M. W. Kneedler. Burial will take place in Allegheny Memorial Cemetery.

Dr. Charles C. Huff.

Dr. Charles C. Huff, 79, one of the oldest physicians in the Homestead district, died last night at his home, 311 East Ninth avenue, Homestead. Graduating from the University of Michigan in 1881, Dr. Huff settled in Homestead two years later and practiced in the borough until his retirement.

He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Homestead, Amity Lodge No. 685, F. and A. M., the Consistory and the Shriners. He is survived by his son, Harold; a sister, Mrs. Joseph Miller, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at his home at 2 p. m. Friday. Interment will be in Homewood Cemetery.

Mrs. Mildred E. Goodman.

Services for Mrs. Mildred Evans Goodman, 36, daughter of George Edward Evans, Pittsburgh's superintendent of building inspection, will be at 4 p. m. tomorrow at Simon's Chapel, 2025 Perrysville avenue, North Side. Interment will be in Brushcreek Cemetery, Irwin.

Mrs. Goodman, the wife of Percival Goodman, a New York architect, died last night following a lingering illness. She was a graduate of Vassar and the University of Pittsburgh, and studied music in Europe.

Besides her husband and father, Mrs. Goodman is survived by a son, George Edward Goodman, and a sister, Elinore Evans Ridge.

John Lurk.

Funeral services for John Lurk, 75, will be held at the William Sirlin funeral home, 620 East Ohio street, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. He died Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alma Smith, of 1709 Termon avenue, North Side.

Besides Mrs. Smith he leaves two other daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Stolen and Miss Edith Lurk; a son, Arthur Lurk, and two sisters.

Must be telephoned to the Want Ad Service Department, between the hours of 8:30 A. M. and 5:30 P. M.

Telephone requests for cancellation or correction are made over the telephone, confirmation must be sent immediately by letter to the Classified Advertising Manager.

A "Cancellation Number" is given to persons authorizing cancellations. This number must be kept by advertiser as a record of the transaction, for use in case of dispute of verification until payment is made.

Notice of typographical errors must be given in time for correction before the second insertion. The Sun-Telegraph will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion of advertisement.

BOX NUMBER REPLIES:
The Sun-Telegraph maintains a complete and efficient "Box Number" service for the accommodation of classified advertisers, without extra charge. The Box Number, in lieu of advertiser's name and address, counts as three words in figuring cost of advertisements. Answers may be picked up at the Sun-Telegraph Main Office at Telegraph Square, or at the Fifth Ave. Branch, Diamond Market. If replies to box number advertisements are to be mailed, postage must be paid for by advertiser.

ORDERING YOUR WANT AD:
You may MAIL your ad to "Classified Advertising Manager Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania," or you may BRING it to the Sun-Telegraph Main Office at Telegraph Square at the Accommodation Office, corner Fifth Ave. and Market St.; or you may PHONE your Want Ad to "CHARGE" it to Grant 5400 — "Want Ad Department." Use the method most convenient to you.

SPECIAL PERSONAL SERVICE:
If you have some special need for which you require personal counsel on copy, at your home or office, just call the Classified Advertising Manager and ask to have representative call. No extra charge.

CONTRACT RATES:
The Sun-Telegraph will submit to any professional advertiser special schedule of rates on yearly basis.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"And it's like Studsy nudging Morelli under the table when he started to tell you about the drunken cousin of—what was it?—Dick O'Brien's that Julia Wolf knew."

I got up and put our cups on a table. "I don't see how any detective can hope to get along without being married to you, but, just the same, you're overdoing it. Studsy nudging Morelli is my idea of something to spend a lot of time not worrying about. I'd rather worry about whether they pushed Sparrow around to keep me from being hurt or to keep me from being told something. I'm sleepy."

Nora shook me awake at quarter past ten. "The telephone," she said. "It's Herbert Macaulay and he says it's important."

I went into the bedroom—I had slept in the livingroom—to the telephone. Dorothy was sleeping soundly. I mumbled, "Hello," into the telephone.

Macauley said: "It's too early for that lunch, but I've got to see you right away. Can I come up now?"

"Sure. Come up for breakfast."

"I've had it. Get yours and I'll be up in fifteen minutes."

"Right."

Dorothy opened her eyes less than half way, said, "I must be late," sleepily, turned over, and returned to unconsciousness.

I put cold water on my face and hands, brushed my teeth and hair, and went back to the living room. "He's coming up," I told Nora. "He's had breakfast, but you'd better order some coffee for him. I want chicken livers."

"Am I invited to your party or do I—"

Invited to 'Party'

"Sure. You're never met Macaulay, have you? He's a pretty good guy. I was attached to his outfit for a few days once, up around Vaux, and we looked each other up after the war. He threw a couple of jobs my way, including the Wynant one. How about a drop of something to cut the rust?"

"Why don't you stay sober today?"

"We didn't come to New York to stay sober. Want to see a hockey game tonight?"

"I'd like to." She poured me a drink and went to order breakfast.

I looked through the morning papers. They had the news of Jorgensen's being picked up by the Boston police and of Nunheim's murder, but further developments of what the tabloids called "The Hell's Kitchen Gang War," the arrest of "Prince Mike" Gerguson, and an interview with the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping negotiations got more space.

Macaulay and the bellboy who brought Asta up arrived together. Asta liked Macaulay because when he patted her he gave her something to set her weight against: she was never very fond of gentleness.

He had lines around his mouth this morning and some of the rosiness was gone from his cheeks. "Where'd the police get this new line?" he asked. "Do they think—" He broke off as Nora came in. She had dressed.

"Nora, this is Herbert Macaulay," I said. "My wife."

They shook hands and Nora said: "Nick would only let me order some coffee for you. Can't I—"

"No, thanks, I've just finished breakfast."

I said: "Now what's this about the police?"

He hesitated.

"Nora knows practically everything I know," I assured him, "so unless it's something you'd rather not—"

"No, no, nothing like that," he said. "It's—well—for Mrs. Charles' sake. I don't want to cause her anxiety."

"Then out with it. She only worries about things she doesn't know. What's the new police line?"

"Lieut. Guild came to see me this morning," he said. "First he showed me a piece of watch-chain with a knife attached to it and asked me if I'd ever seen them before. I had: they were Wynant's. I told him I thought I had: I thought they looked like Wynant's. Then he asked me if I knew of any way in which they could have come into anybody else's possession and, after some beating about the bush, I discovered that by anybody else he meant you or Mimi. I told him certainly—Wynant could have given them to either of you, you could have stolen them or found them on the street, or you could have got them from somebody Wynant gave them to. There were other ways, too, for you to have got them. I told him, but he knew I was kidding him, so he wouldn't let me tell him about them."

There were spots of color in Nora's cheeks and her eyes were dark. "The idiot!"

"Now, now," I said. "Maybe I should have warned you—he was heading in that direction last night. I think it's likely my old pal Mimi gave him a prod or two. What else did he turn the searchlight on?"

Sees Mimi Hand

"He wanted to know about—what he asked was: 'Do you figure Charles and the Wolf dame was still playing around together? Or was that all washed up?'"

"That's the Mimi touch, all right," I said. "What'd you tell him?"

"I told him I didn't know you were 'still' playing around together because I didn't know that you had ever played around together, and reminded him that you hadn't been living in New York for a long time anyway."

I said: "Don't try to make a liar out of Mac. What'd he say to that?"

"Nothing. He asked me if I thought Jorgensen knew about you and Mimi and, when I asked him what about you and Mimi, he accused me of acting the innocent—they were his words—so we didn't get very far. He was interested in the times I had seen you, also, where and when to the exact inch and second."

"That's nice," I said. "I've got lousy alibis."

A waiter came in with our breakfast. We talked about this and that until he had set the table and gone away.

Then Macaulay said: "You've nothing to be afraid of. I'm going to turn Wynant over to the police." His voice was unsteady and a little choked.

"Are you sure he did it?" I asked. "I'm not."

He said simply: "I know." He cleared this throat. "Even if there was a chance in a thousand of my being wrong—and there isn't—he's a madman, Charles. He shouldn't be loose."

"That's probably right enough," I began, "and if you know—"

"I know," he repeated. "I saw him the afternoon he killed her; it couldn't've been half an hour after he'd killed her, though I didn't know that, didn't even know she'd been killed. I—well—I know it now."

"You met him in Hermann's office?"

"What?"

"You were supposed to have been in the office of a man named Hermann, on Fifty-seventh street, from around 3 o'clock till around 4 in the afternoon. At least, that's what the police told me."

What Really Happened

"That's right," he said. "I mean that's the story they got. What really happened, after I failed to find Wynant or any news of him at the Plaza, and phoned my office and Julia with no better results, I gave him up and started walking down to Hermann's. He's a mining engineer, a client of mine. I had just finished drawing up some articles of incorporation for him, and there were some minor changes to be made in them. When I got to Fifty-seventh street I suddenly got a feeling that I was being followed—you know the feeling. I couldn't think of any reason for anybody shadowing me, but, still, I'm a lawyer and there might be. Anyhow, I wanted to find out, so I turned east on Fifty-seventh and walked over to Madison and still wasn't sure. There was a small sallow man I thought I'd seen around the Plaza, but—the quickest way to find out seemed to be by taking a taxi, so I did that and told the driver to drive east. There was too much traffic there for me to see whether this small man or anybody else took a taxi after me, so I had my driver turn south at Third, east again on Fifty-sixth, and south again on Second avenue, and by that time I was pretty sure a yellow taxi was following me. I couldn't see whether my small man was in it, of course; it wasn't close enough for that. And at the next corner, when a red light stopped us, I saw Wynant. He was in a taxicab going west on Fifty-fifth street. Naturally, that didn't surprise me very much; we were only two blocks from Julia's and I took it for granted she hadn't wanted me to know he was there when I phoned and that he was now on his way over to meet me at the Plaza. He was never very punctual. So I told my driver to turn west, but at Lexington avenue—we were half a block behind him—Wynant's taxicab turned south. That wasn't the way to the Plaza and wasn't even the way to my office, so I said to hell with him and turned my attention to the taxi following me — and it wasn't there any more. I kept a lookout behind all the way over to Hermann's and saw no sign at all of anybody following me."

"What time was it when you saw Wynant?" I asked.

Saw Wynant

"It must've been 15 or 20 minutes past three. It was 20 minutes to four when I got to Hermann's and I imagine that was 20 to 25 minutes later. Well, Hermann's secretary—Louise Jacobs, the girl I was with when I saw you last night—told me he had been locked up in a conference all afternoon, but would probably be through in a few minutes, and he was, and I got through with him in 10 or 15 minutes and went back to my office.

"I take it you weren't close enough to Wynant to see whether he looked excited, was wearing his watchchain, smelled of gunpowder—things like that."

"That's right. All I saw was his profile going past, but don't think I'm not sure it was Wynant."

"I won't. Go ahead," I said.

"He didn't phone again. I'd been back about an hour when the police phoned—Julia was dead. Now you must understand that I didn't think Wynant had killed her—not for a minute. You can understand that—you still don't think he did. So when I went over there and the police began to ask me questions about him and I could see they suspected nim. I did what 99 out of 100 lawyers would've done for their clients—I said nothing about having seen him in that neighborhood at about the time that the murder must have been committed. I told them what I told you—about having the date with him and him not showing up—and let them understand that I had gone over to Hermann's straight from the Plaza."

DISPUTE WITH BRITAIN OVER OREGON TERRITORY

The expansionists in President Polk's administration wanted the whole Oregon territory from California to 54° 40' N. Lat., heretofore jointly occupied by United States and Britain. But President Polk, in face of the Mexican War, proposed the 49° N. L. as compromise border line. Although rejected at first by Britain, it was accepted finally (June, 1846), thus extending the United States to the Pacific. Above cartoon illustrates the attitude of various nations concerned in the Oregon question before the final settlement. (U. S. History)

FREE SOILERS, AND LIBERTY PARTY FUSED ON SLAVERY

President James K. Polk's administration (1845-1849) is chiefly memorable for the great expansion of United States in South and West (Mexican War, 1846-48), North and West (Oregon Settlement, 1846). Other important measures were: Re-enaction of independent treasury, lowering of tariff, admission of Iowa and Wisconsin as states, rejection of the Wilmot Proviso (against slavery in annexed territories) by Senate, formation of Free Soil party (against increase of slavery), a result of the evasive policy of the administration. They joined the Liberty party (anti-slave), forming a third strong party instrumental in the defeat of the Democrats at the 1848 presidential election, when Gen. Zachary Taylor became President on the Whig ticket. Contemporary Cartoon, N. Y. Historical Society

MORMONS—THE COLONIZERS OF UTAH

Mormons, a communal sect believing in the Trinity, the punishment of sins, the saving of mankind by faith, was founded by Joseph Smith, Jr., in 1830. They practiced polygamy, which brought conflict with the population leading to the lynching of its founder (1844) in Illinois.

Brigham Young, the new leader, took the congregation to the Great Salt Lake Valley (1847). By diligent farming and trading, profiting too by the passing stream of fortune seekers traveling to California, they became prosperous. Later they discontinued polygamy, abiding by the federal law. Their territory was admitted into the Union as Utah State (1896). (U. S. History)

POISONOUS SNAKES—ALLIGATORS

Besides the rattlesnake, the water moccasin (cotton-mouth), copperhead, coral- and harlequin snakes are venomous, found in our country (above).

When bitten by a poisonous snake, call doctor, cut wound to make it bleed freely, suck it if mouth is free from sores, apply turniquet between wound and heart; inject anti-venin to bottom of each fang wound, stimulate heart by injecting 15-20 drops of strychnine solution into arm or leg. Repeat in 20 minutes until muscles become rigid. Loosen turniquet each 20 minutes for one minute.

Crocodilians include the alligator, the crocodile and allies. They are large, water loving and have hard bony plates in the tough skin. (Science)

DISCOVERY OF LANDS, TRADE CHANNELS—CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, VASCO DA GAMA

Revival of works of ancient scientists in the Renaissance suggested that the earth was round. Nations, west of Italy, wishing to participate in the lucrative trade with the Orient, wanted to reach India via West and South. Diaz, of Portugal, rounded the Cape of Good Hope (1487), concluding the exploration of the West African coast. Columbus, the Italian, under Spanish flag, sailed westward (1492), discovering America, believing it India. An old cut (above left) represents his first interview with the Indians. Vasco da Gama, Portuguese, reached, via Cape of Good Hope, Calcutta, India (1498), opening a new trade channel. Above right: Da Gama received by the Samorim of Calcutta. Ferdinand Magalhaens (Magellan), Portuguese, was the first to circumnavigate the earth; he met his death (1521) on one of the Philippine Islands at the hand of natives.

The Dutch and French soon took the lion's share of the Oriental trade with the British as a new claimant in the following centuries. (World History)

MORSE'S ELECTROMAGNETIC TELEGRAPH

Morse's telegraph is based on the electromagnetic attraction of iron by a coil through which direct current flows. By depressing the key (K) current is sent to the sounder (C); stop (D) strikes anvil (E), giving forth a click. Short intervals between clicks represent dots, long ones dashes; combination of these forms letters, messages. Providing (D) with a pencil contacting a moving paper strip, it will register dots and dashes.

Relay is an electromagnetic switch connecting local battery (B) to the sounder, so that the strong current from the battery, instead of the incoming weak of line (a-a'), will operate sounder.

Above: Cities of Lacrosse, Madison, Milwaukee are shown connected. Lacrosse calling Milwaukee opens switch (S) and plays key (K). Both other stations will receive clicks, but Milwaukee alone will answer, since each station has its own call signal. Adding type-wheels of synchronous rotation, printing telegraph was evolved. MARS THE FOURTH PLANET FROM THE SUN

Mars has a mean diameter of 4,216 miles and its mean distance from the sun is 1.52 astronomical units. It has a mass of about 1/10 of that of the earth, with a mean density of 4; the surface gravity is 0.38, that is, an object weighing 100 pounds on earth weighs 38 pounds on Mars.

The Mars shows decided markings: White polar caps (snow), and network of straight lines believed by some to be canals made by intelligent beings. Since many of these lines shift, they may be strips of vegetation. Mars has a thin atmosphere and may have some sort of life. Above: Photos (1, 3, 4, 6) of Mars and drawing (2) representing the markings by lines; 5 is a photo of drawing 2 through the same telescope, showing by its similarity to the original photos of the Mars that the markings may be straight lines. Portrait on Bomb-Proof Canvas

Always seemed to us that the place to look at Whistler's mother was in the Louvre.

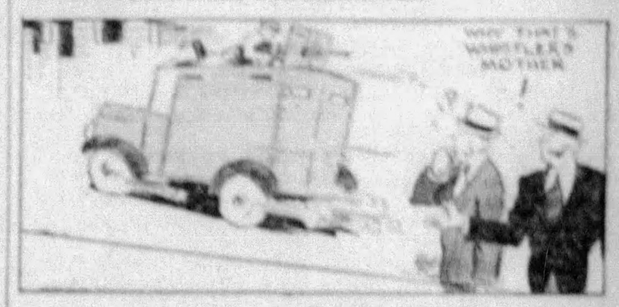
It is spotted there like a queen bee in the hive. When you walked up the steps and stuck out your mitt for a right turn that she was.

She is back again in Paris after a triumphant tour of her homeland, in an armored truck.

She's the most important lady in the Louvre. And that takes in Mourning Lizzie. We never did see anything so marvelous in Mona Lisa and her rubberized grin.

Strange thing about that Mourning Lizzie. Although all you see is her head and back you know she is wearing rat heels and has a run in her stocking.

But Jimmie's ma is a real lady. She seems to represent all old ladies. And what better mission could we give her than to run her around our peaceful land in an armored truck?



Time to do something about it when old folks ain't even safe in paintings. Still, she lost a good chance to iron things out with Lisa. The Meaner was hi-jacked once right out of the Louvre.

No more delicate compliment could be paid to motherhood than a trip through the old neighborhood in a rose-bedecked and bullet-proof chariot.

And when the caterpillar tractors start again through Flanders, little children will poke their shy heads out of machine gun emplacements and ask, "Which tank is James McNeil's mother?"

France reduced her debt to us when she gracefully gave us the loan of that magnificent painting for a few months.

But a look at it proves that even a genius drops a technical stitch once in a while. The pose is superb. The tired face is the last word in realism. The sad hands are folded in her lap. But how come that Whistler left off the bullet-proof vest?

She's back in France safe and sound. Although we realize that she belongs here we will allow her to stay in Paris until the war is over.

ODD FACTS

The new organ in the Hall of Gregory XIII, in the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music, Rome, works electrically. It has five manuals and 112 registers. It is said to be the largest and most perfect organ in the world.

The production of the new British museum catalog which will contain 2,000,000 titles, will cost altogether about $1,000,000.

In these days of hustle and concentrated labor, a slight cold which confines the sufferer to the house for a day or so may be a disguised blessing, according to one medical expert, as it gives a much-needed rest.

A lychgate in front of a church was the place where, in other days, the bearers of a funeral rested the coffin before it was taken into church.

Keeping a Promise

Congress Has Done Well in Aiding the Texas-Panama Highway Project

Funds were authorized to finance the completion of plans and surveys for an inter-American highway from the Texas border to the Panama Canal when the House accepted the Senate amendment to the new road construction bill, which was offered by Senator McNary, of Oregon.

The Texas-Panama highway will be the first link in the proposed Pan-American Highway between the United States and Chile.

Ever since the fifth Pan-American conference at Santiago, in 1923, the United States and Mexico have led the Pan-American republics in urging the feasibility of building a highway from the northern part of North America to the southern part of South America.

At the sixth Pan-American conference in Havana, Cuba, in 1928, the project was heartily indorsed by the delegations from all the American republics.

Congress in the following year, upon the recommendation of President Coolidge, appropriated $50,000 toward a reconnaissance survey of the Central American link of the proposed highway.

This survey was made by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture with the assistance of the Central American republics.

President Roosevelt promised the seventh Pan-American conference at Montevideo last winter to recommend to the Congress that the United States bear the cost of surveying the Texas-Panama Canal link on the proposed highway and invite the Mexican and Central American republics to assume a share of the construction costs. The McNary amendment keeps that promise.

A Pan-American highway linking up the three Americas will do more to promote travel, trade and understanding between their peoples than all the treaties that have been or can be negotiated.

Once this highway is open from the Texas border to the Panama Canal, Pan-American sentiment will be quickened in favor of extending it to the southern part of South America.

Congress took a long step toward the realization of this Pan-American dream by authorizing the comparatively small amount necessary to survey the first link in the inter-American highway, which will ultimately bind the three Americas in a new and welcome tie of commerce and friendship.

The Cost of Building

The Federal Trade Commission Hearing Will Throw Light on an Important Problem

Five associations of dealers in building supplies have been ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to answer at a hearing in Washington on July 13 to charges that they have been operating to suppress competition and increase prices.

Several hundred dealers in Western Pennsylvania and Northern Ohio, of whom 75 are named in the formal complaint, are alleged to be affiliated with the five associations.

The investigation is to be welcomed for the light it will throw on the important question: "Is the cost of building too high?"

Building operations here have been at a low ebb for years, and even when other industries are reviving the building industry continues to languish.

The explanation commonly given is that it costs too much to build a house. But those who say this generally have the labor cost in mind rather than the cost of materials. It will be interesting to see the evidence as to the latter.

Pittsburgh sorely needs a revival in building, not only because the building industry is one of the largest employers of labor, but also because Pittsburgh produces building materials, such as steel, sand, gravel, cement, concrete, glass and hardware.

Tidying Up the City

The Municipal Authorities, as Well as the People, Should Co-operate With the Clubwomen

The committee of the Congress of Women's Clubs which is in charge of the clubwomen's campaign for a cleaner city has begun its work, under the able chairmanship of Miss Mary P. Lang, sister of former Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, with a vim and directness that promise results.

We note appreciatively that the women are not indulging in mere generalities as to what can be done to tidy up the city, but, as the saying is, are "getting down to brass tacks" right at the outset, and leaving no room for doubt as to what everyone should do to help in this praiseworthy movement.

Here, for instance, is one thing that the city can do: Put trash containers—plenty of them—in Schenley Park, so that no one will have any excuse for leaving picnic refuse on the lawns, or for throwing cigaret boxes or chewing gum wrappers on the roads or sidewalks.

It is to be hoped that the municipal authorities and the people generally will catch the spirit that animates Miss Lang's committee and will co-operate to the limit.

A Woman Food Inspector

Dr. Moyer, Public Health Director, Grants Deserved Recognition to the Fair Sex

It is gratifying to find the city administration granting recognition to the fair sex.

The appointment of Mrs. Julia Debresen as a municipal food inspector is a case in point.

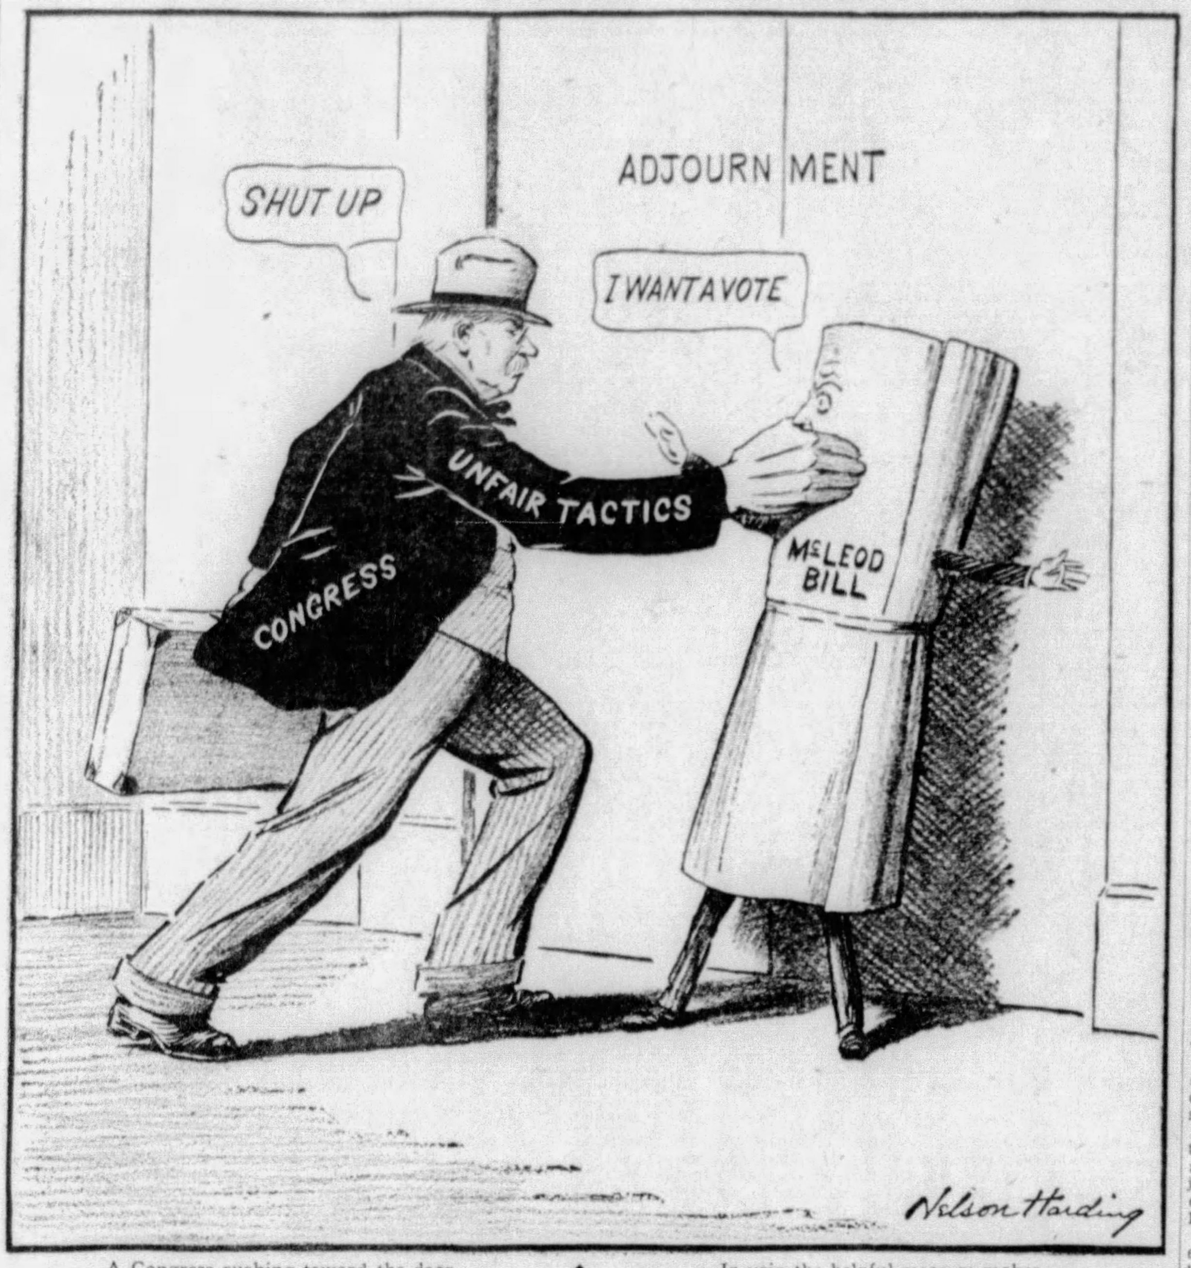
The naming of a woman to such a position is without precedent, we believe; but provided she is qualified—and there is no reason for thinking she is not—it is about time the precedent should be broken and the fact recognized that women are citizens and taxpayers and are entitled to fill public offices of all sorts for which they are fitted.

Notable, too, is the appointment of Mrs. Hazel Fitzgerald as a guard at the South Park swimming pool.

There are naturally some jobs—those of firemen, for example—of which women are not capable. But there is a probability that, technical qualifications being equal, women, especially those who have been housewives, are more likely than men to give good service as food inspectors.

At any rate women should not be discriminated against in the filling of municipal jobs, and the appointment of Mrs. Debresen is welcome as evidence that there is no discrimination in Public Health Director Ray P. Moyer's department.

A Congress Rushing Toward the Door -:- By Nelson Harding



A Congress rushing toward the door
In haste to get away,
Ignoring public sentiment,
And heedless of fair play.

In vain the helpful measure makes
A fair and square demand,
Its voice is gagged and silenced by
A ruthless, heavy hand.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 13.—I rarely pick up one of those glossy magazines of the leisure classes in club lounge or dental office without seeing a photograph of a somewhat mysterious worldling called Snowy Baker. His association seems only with men of wealth and celebrity.

He may be in polo togs breezing down a Hollywood field, on the tennis courts of Palm Beach or bob-sledding at St. Moritz. Always very much the gentleman of leisure and leading the fabulous life of Reilly. Like Lawrence of Arabia, he seems to be everywhere, knows everybody but has no intimates.

Those I ask who should know of him, praise his gallantry in sports but no one seems to know his antecedents or the source of his income. He has an interesting face, aquiline nose, piercing eyes and hair en brosse. The sort that makes ladies forget conversation when he comes into a room.

Almost any novelist could fit him in the opening chapter of a novel with a locale on the Riviera, Newport or Ostend. The only person I have seen in real life who surpasses his photographic nonchalance is the urbane Ben Ali Haggin. I'll probably learn Baker, like Lexington, Ky., born Haggin, is a product of Platform, Neb., or something.

Don Barclay, eccentric comedian of the old burlesque school with the profile of a toucan and hair part in a lightning streak, has appeared in several movies recently and may at last be finding his niche. He was one of the few comics to excite the interest of Florenz Ziegfeld. He was spotted in a Follies and several other nugae canorae, but the inexorable box office statistics refused to justify the hopes. And Barclay would vanish, bob up again, almost click in a big way and vanish again.

An open fronted museum on Broadway is presenting a modified version of the old wiggle dances of the circus lots to the clarinet tune that suggests the veiled ladies of Turkey. The author of that famous tune, incidentally, which was officially known as "Danse du Ventre," was none other than the present Congressman Sol Bloom, of New York. During the famous performance of "Little Egypt" at the 1893 World's Fair in Chicago, it was called colloquially "The Hootchie Kootchie." At the time Bloom wrote it he was a composer and foremost music publisher on Broadway.

James M. Cain, the author, is conducting a one-man campaign to make New York City catfish conscious. Every middle westerner and southerner knows the indescribable gustatory joy of this lowly delicacy. Eating in many parts of the world, I have never encountered a dish—not even the steak pudding at Simpson's on the Strand, the pressed duck at Tour d'Argent or the sole of Margeury's—to compare with the fried catfish served at Hud Faudree's fly-blown short order counter back home.

* * *

Cain was introduced to fried catfish by two estimable Southerners, Lawrence Stallings and Morris Markey. He was entranced and decided the horrible name had prevented it from becoming a famous delicacy. So he hunted up the Indian name for catfish—Tuce. The first American restaurateur, Horchen in Berlin featured it for years, to put it on his menu was Papa Moneta down on a bend of Mulberry street. Moneta has created a special sauce, serves the dish cold, and lists it on his menu as Tuce a la Cain. The Waldorf, Ritz, and Pierre's are following this lead. And thus is fried catfish at last coming into its own in the metropolis.

* * *

Nearest to the egg-beaten white flakiness of fried catfish—found mostly under rocks in muddy streams—I imagine is the pompano, so delectable in the New Orleans culinary array. And second in piscatorial line is the Colorado mountain trout if broiled almost immediately after caught. Michael Arlen, running across it en route to California, thought it America's most savory dish. A full-sized mudcat, as we dubbed them along the Ohio, resembles Wilton Lackaye with a Lawrence d'Orsay mustache and a Louis Sobol grin.

Grand simile by E. E. Paramore, Jr.: "Split all over like a Chinese vase."

And William Wellman doesn't think Bing Crosby should have been starred in "We're Not Dressing." He thinks it should have been Sally Rand. Incidentally, an imaginative fellow such as Wellman would be dandy to direct a movie I plan on wakeful nights. It is one of those revolving sectional things in the manner of "Grand Hotel," only it will be filmed in Central Park.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Should America Be Discussed in American Public Schools?

There's a great to-do going on in the schools of Southern California. Someone has discovered that High School students, instead of studying the mere "dry bones" of history, are encouraged to discuss American institutions and compare them with the institutions of other countries.

For example, there's this matter of Planned Production. Planned Production has been getting plenty of publicity outside the schools, ever since the depression began and we realized that millions were starving in the midst of abundance. Promptly writers began to make books, editors began to fill columns with discussions of whether we should or shouldn't control our boundless output of oats, coats, pigs, peaches, oil, coal—or what have you?

And did or didn't the state or federal government have the right to tell the farmer, mine owner and manufacturer how, when and which?

Copious data also began to be broadcast showing the dire results of what happened when there wasn't any control. There—not to be ducked or contradicted—were American stories of gallons of surplus milk and crates of fruit spilled into our oceans and rivers; of surplus corn burned as fuel in the Middle-West—while tenement dwellers starved.

Wasn't something wrong, all America asked, when things like this could happen? Wasn't there criminal stupidity or greed somewhere? There certainly was, said frugal foreign nations, who had looked on our abundance with envious eyes. No sensible person, much less a great nation, would waste its wealth like that! It was a ghastly lesson.

Such a ghastly lesson that Soviet Russia, trying to save its future generations from a similar catastrophe, decided to tell its children what it was all about. So presently, in the grade schools of Russia, there appeared a small volume called "THE RUSSIAN Primer."

The Russian Primer was intended for the use of children of 12 to 14 years of age. In simple language it tells the story of Unplanned Production, and what happened when a people permitted it. The quotations are taken from our own American writers, the incidents from our American scene. There was no jeering criticisms of America, no communistic propaganda. It was a plain story, for young minds, of bad housekeeping.

Within a few weeks the grown-up minds of America were gravely studying that little Russian school book. No one—worse luck!—could deny a thing that was said, or find fault with the manner of its telling. It was all only too true.

But what could America do about it? What was the answer to our stupid, wasteful, cruel career of Unplanned Production?

We're still looking for an answer . . . beginning to make serious efforts toward finding it. And the struggle to find it is making great national history. So, recently, some enthusiastic and alert young teachers in various parts of Southern California said to each other:

"Shouldn't the youngsters know about what's going on, just as they know about the World War or any other phase in modern history? Shouldn't they take their part in all this fine discussion and investigation; be urged to think about it all for themselves; make opinions for themselves?"

And then someone introduced the Russian Primer!

Immediately, from every conservative American home, from P. T. A. meetings, religious organizations, patriotic societies, rose the horrified howl of, "They're teaching Communism in our public schools! They're teaching our children to sneer at America . . . training them to betray America . . . turning them into radicals, anarchists!"

And now the teachers, in various parts of Southern California, are being "investigated" and "reprimanded."

Should they be? Have or haven't they done a "vicious and destructive thing?" Was it "traitorous" to introduce the Russian Primer into the courses?

SHOULD OR SHOULDN'T STUDENTS OF HIGH SCHOOL AGE BE ALLOWED TO LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT THEIR COUNTRY . . . BE ALLOWED TO DISCUSS AND POSSIBLY CRITISIZE ITS PROGRAMS AND INSTITUTIONS . . . BE ALLOWED TO COMPARE ITS METHODS WITH THOSE OF OTHER NATIONS?

What do YOU think?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Light as Summer Love

It scarcely seems worth the effort to struggle your way into a man's affections, now that the traffic is so congested and the parking time is so short.

When a woman tries to chain a man to her side, he soon begins to look around for a blonde to use as a file, so that he can do a Dillinger.

* * * *

If you are going in for the Mae West curves, you can eat your cake and have "IT," too. But, however popular the padding, nudism will never have much appeal for the woman who weighs over 150 pounds.

* * *

The only "technique" which any girl needs in the love-game is to know how to be amiable, lovable and mildly responsive—and, at the same time, to keep her heart always at a slightly lower temperature than the man's.

* * *

Many a girl goes into marriage with a trousseau made up of frills and dancing frocks, only to discover, after the honeymoon, that she will probably spend three-quarters of her life in kitchen bungalow-aprons.

* * *

When a man takes a girl out, it is usually in order to give his brain a complete rest—which is probably why he always chooses a woman who knows how to make him laugh and dodges a girl who makes him THINK.

* * *

As long as falling in love is just a matter of mood with a man, marriage will continue to be just a matter of chance, a wife just a matter of luck and divorce just a matter of time.

* * *

It has been predicted by Voliva that the devil will take over the world somewhere around Labor Day. But up to that time, no doubt, Beelzebub figures that he can loll back and take it easy, knowing that the politicians, the beach sirens and the summer widows will carry on his work and finish whatever the racketeers may overlook.

Clothes do not make the woman—but that's not what she buys them for, says Reno Ruth. She buys them to make the men.

Senate Candidates Should Tell League Stand

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ONE-THIRD of the membership of the United States Senate will be elected this year. Every candidate for the Senate owes it to his constituents to tell them whether he is for or against entering the League of Nations, either by the front door of the League Covenant or the back door of the League Court.

Ratification of the League Court protocols which are now before the Committee on Foreign Relations would take the United States into the League through the back-door entrance to that entangling political alliance.

Consideration of these intricate engagements has been postponed until the Senate reconvenes next January. Final action on these proposed treaties may well be the most important action of the next Congress.

Some people seem to think that the United States under these protocols could go in the court and then leave it whenever a question came up which this country thought ought not to be tried by the court. That theory is exploded in the able brief filed with the committee recently by a no less eminent jurist and diplomatist than our former Ambassador to Mexico, Reuben Clark, Jr. In the light of his argument no candidate for the Senate can logically contend that this country can escape the jurisdiction of the League by becoming a member of its court. Take for example the obligations under article 13 of the League Covenant.

* * *

Agree to Submit To Any Award

MEMBERS of the league agree in this article "to carry out in good faith any award that may be rendered and not to resort to war against a member of the League which complies therewith."

It is also provided in this same article that in case of failure to carry out an award, "the council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto." Ambassador Clark calls attention to the fact that this jurisdiction of the League may well extend to all members of the League Court.

Many advocates of American entry into the League Court insist that this country would carry out any award of the Court made against us. Can we be sure of that? Ambassador Clark, in his brief, cites an improbable case, as he says, but one involving legal principles that might also be involved in cases which might easily arise.

"Assume that Great Britain," says Mr. Clark, "which has no port in the Pacific, but desires to secure one, proposed to Mexico the exchange of British Honduras for Lower California. Assume further that Mexico accepts. Unless we abandoned the nation's old policies, we should not be willing to allow this exchange to be made but there is no apparent principle of international law which should be violated by such a transfer.

"Such a situation would leave two courses open to us.

"Either fight to keep Britain out of possession or adjust the matter by peaceful means.

"If we threaten war, Britain could either fight or invoke the provisions of Article 12 or Article 17 of the covenant. If we did not wish to fight, we could invoke Article 12 on the thesis that by signing the League Court protocol and adopting the court statute we had rendered ourselves amenable to this arbitrable provision of the League Covenant as we admit we have done to the advisory opinion provision of Article 14.

"If we went to arbitration it is difficult to see how we should be able to win our cause if the court acted as a judicial body, for there is no international law prohibiting nations from exchanging territory. If we went to the council it is difficult to see how that body could declare that two nations might not do that which international law, custom and precedent said they could do, merely because a third power, which was only indirectly and potentially affected did not wish them to do it. In this view the council would make an award against us."

* * *

Might Be Threat To Our Security

WHAT would happen then? Is there any candidate for the Senate this year, Democrat or Republican, who thinks the United States would not regard a British, Japanese or other foreign naval base at Magdalena Bay as such a threat to our national security and safety "as not to be tolerated and so undertake to prevent by force" any foreign power from occupying that territory in spite of the award made against us by the league?

Of course if we went to war under such circumstances we should be subject to the sanctions provided by the League Covenant for such a situation.

This is only one of the possible cases cited in Mr. Clark's brief which might arise if this country enters the League Court. Every candidate for the Sante should read this brief before presuming to discuss the question of ratifying these protocols. Every candidate for the Senate should tell the people where he stands upon the question of ratification before election day.

Human Side of the News

Rumor Has It That the Hapsburg Dynasty Is to Be Restored, With Prince Otto on the Throne

By Edwin C. Hill

LITTLE Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss rules the roost in Austria, but the little birds sing a song that the Hapsburgs are coming back. With deep-seated and probably incurable enmity between the Nazis and the Socialists, a rift and a hatred which carries with it always the menace of riot and bloodshed, if not of actual civil war, perhaps a restoration of the old monarchy might be the way out.

Prince Otto of Hapsburg, heir of the ancient throne, comes to his twenty-first birthday with considerable expectations. Tirelessly working in his interest is his extraordinary mother, the ex-Empress Zita, Italian born. Zita will go down in history as one of the most striking figures of these times.

She was born a Bourbon-Parma. Her grandfather, the Duke of Parma, was murdered. Her father was driven out when he was 11. She grew up in the hard school of poverty and adversity, soared to dazzling heights for a brief time as Austrian Empress, and was hurled suddenly and violently into poverty and adversity. But there is a flame in the heart of this little frail woman, with deep, dark rings cut under her eyes, which will not let her rest.

Twice she drove her exiled Emperor husband into attempts to get back his lost Hungarian throne. She faced the danger with him. She shared his exile until he died, then she began training her eldest son. To her, he is ever and always a king.

* * *

Otto, Handsomest Prince in World

OTTO was born with many gifts—a quick, receptive mind and good looks, which have made him the handsomest, most romantic-appearing Prince in the world. But he found also, a cup of bitterness and tears to drink. He was born at Wartholz Castle, November 20, 1912.

His father was then a simple major in the Austrian Army—only one of a shoal of archdukes. The pistols which killed Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, in Sarajevo, June 28, 1914, thereby bringing about the World War, suddenly shot the baby Otto's father into the position of heir apparent.

When Otto was four, the old man's death made Archduke Karl the new Emperor, and Otto became Crown Prince. From the palace windows his baby eyes saw the strong young men, with flower-bedecked hats, going away to the war singing. From those same windows he saw some of them comng back, shell-blasted and silent.

In 1918, at the age of six, he saw Vienna in the throes of revolution. A short sojurn in a castle and then escape to Switzerland. The family moved from place to place. Then news that his father and mother had been captured when trying to get back the Hungarian throne, and were being taken away as prisoners to an unknown destination.

Then Madeira, where his father was an exile and ill. March 27, 1922, in the night, the 10-year-old boy was summoned to see his father receive the last sacrements. Four days later the child witnessed his parent's death agony.

Once more the stricken family's dreary trek began. A castle at Bilboa, another at San Sebastian, a small house at Lequeitio, school days at the Benedictine Grammar School, at Clairvaux, in Luxemburg. Then a move to Ham Castle, Steenockerzeel, in Belgium, while he attended the University of Louvain and took the extended course in languages, literature, history and politics that a future King needs. He graduated with honors. Now he is ready for anything—even a throne.

A facinating capital, Vienna, even in its decline, murdered by the Great War. Once the most brilliant center of Europe, gayer even than Paris, it knows the throb of tragedy. Over it hangs the curse of the Hapsburgs. Within it is one of the most affecting sepulchres in the world.

In an obscure side street is the old, old Church of the Capucines. And I think of the afternoon, not long ago, when I happened into that little street and rang the bell of the church. There came to the door a young monk of the Capucine Order—brown-bearded, rosy-cheeked, with his brown habit girdled by the course rope which symbolizes the poverty of the order.

* * *

Hapsburgs Buried In Capucine Vault

WHEN I made him understand what I wanted, he took me below, deep down into the crypt of the church, far down where sunlight hadn't penetrated for 300 years. And there he showed me, in that dusty and ancient cellar, all that remains on this earth of the power and glory of the great Hapsburg family. That great ruined family, so haughty in life, the family whose inextinguishable vanity was to be humble in death.

He showed me the lovely white marble chapel where Francis Joseph lies with the murdered Empress Elizabeth, and their unhappy son, Rudolph, who killed himself. He showed me the great bronze catafalque of the Empress Maria Theresa. And he came finally to a jumble of coffins, one piled carelessly upon another. And one of these was the coffin of L'Aiglon the unhappiest child that ever lived.
